Venezuela Calls Off Hunt For Transatlantic Balloon

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Venezuelan authorities Saturday night called off search for the transatlantic balloon Small World. They said they were convinced reports it had landed in Venezuela Friday were a hoax.

Venezuelan planes had searched 16 hours for the balloon, which left the Canary Islands for the West Indies two weeks ago. Its whereabouts had been a mystery since its radio went silent a week ago.

Before returning to Caracas, the searchers landed at Piarco airport in Trinidad, near the Venezuelan Orinoco delta where the balloon was reported to have landed.

Airport Capt. William Lead informed the Venezuelans that Trinidad also had called off the search for lack of substantial evidence that the balloon had landed.

The mystery of the balloon's fate with four Britons — three men and a woman — aboard, grew Saturday night with conflicting reports as to its whereabouts.

A day-long air search brought no trace of the quilted plastic bag or its occupants in the jungle swamps of eastern Venezuela where an amateur radio operator reported it had grounded.

Carl Agustini, civil aviation director of Trinidad, expressed fear the "Small World" might be confronting problems in Midatlantic if meteorological reports are considered.

Body Of Man, Missing Since Dec. 11, Found

DUNDEE, Ill. (AP) — The body of Wallace Smith, 33, of Carpentersville, who disappeared Dec. 11, was found Saturday in a field about four miles southeast of Dundee.

Smith apparently froze to death a few hours after he was last seen in the Deverly Lake Tavern on State Rt. 72, three miles east of Dundee. The temperature dropped to 10 below zero the early morning of Dec. 11.

State police said that Smith, a supervisor for a Chicago trucking firm, was involved in a fight in the tavern. When officers investigated, they found no one who wanted to sign a complaint. Smith, they said, showed obvious effects of drinking.

Police ordered Smith to telephone his wife and ask her to bring him home. He did so, and police left. The tavern was closed a few minutes later, and Smith ejected. Police said he smashed a window of the building with his fist and fled north into a field as they returned to the scene and Smith's wife arrived.

Two searches of the countryside north of the tavern failed to find any trace of him. John F. Schuring, a farmer, found Smith's body Saturday on one of the back fields of his farm, about 11 miles south of the tavern.

New Year Brings Increase In SS Taxes, Benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The New Year will bring a payroll tax boost of about $2 a month for most of the 75 million working Americans covered by social security.

For the 12 million persons now on the retired rolls, 1959 will bring a seven per cent increase in old-age pension checks.

In a related area, administrators of private employee welfare and pension funds for the first time file annual reports to the government on their trustworthiness. The various plans are estimated to be worth more than 30 billion dollars.

The new requirements in the law are the work of the last Congress.

The new Congress will be asked to consider further changes. Some members of Congress would like to add medical benefits to social security coverage.

This year's revision of the Social Security Law means that government pension checks mailed out in February will be seven per cent higher than before, with a minimum increase of $2.

The maximum pension for a retired man and his wife, both past 65, will rise from $162.80 to $174 a month. Couple retiring in the future will be able to draw up to $190 a month. For families with a large number of dependents, the maximum benefit check goes up from $200 to $254 a month.

The cost of the increased benefits will be borne by active workers and employers, who are required to match their employees' tax contribution.

For both, the social security tax rate will go up from 2 1/2 to 2 3/4 per cent, and the amount of annual earnings on which the tax is levied from $4,200 to $4,500 a year.

This will mean that employees earning the full $4,500 must pay $120 a year starting Jan. 1 instead of the old amount of $94.50. This works out to around $2 a month. The self-employed worker, instead of paying 3 1/2 per cent on the first $4,200 of his earnings, will pay 3 3/4 per cent on the first $4,500.

The revision of the law also makes it easier to qualify for government old-age benefits and to earn additional income.

In the field of welfare fund reporting, the government is not sure how the new law will work out.

When President Eisenhower signed the bill last year, he predicted it would result in chaos and would require extensive amendment by Congress to make it effective and workable. He also said that the law would require only summary statements of fund finances, "making it possible to conceal many abuses."

Family's Concern, Worry Surprises College President

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — The "missing" president of Missouri Valley College arrived in Orlando Saturday after a leisurely train and bus trip from Marshall, Mo.

Dr. M. Earle Collins, 55, expressed surprise over the three-day confusion caused when he suddenly decided to catch an earlier train to see his school's football team play East Texas State in the Tangerine Bowl.

"I went around the world a few years ago, and my family didn't hear from me for weeks and weeks, and they didn't worry about me then," he said.

"I don't know what they worried this time."

Mrs. Collins called police after her husband failed to return home after Christmas Eve church services.

Collins said he did not phone his wife because he didn't want to wake her up in case she were asleep. He said, too, that he suddenly thought he might miss some bowl activities so instead of the 3:10 a.m. train he had intended to catch, he took an earlier one.

He couldn't get a sleeper, so he sat up in a day coach, where he met E. S. Quisenberry, a member of the college staff.

When they arrived in Jacksonville, 150 miles north of here, Quisenberry came on to Orlando, but Collins decided to stop over at a hotel and rest for a day.

Friday night he went to a restaurant for supper and noticed in a newspaper that he was supposed to be missing. He wired his family: "Stopped in Jacksonville for a rest. Continue to Orlando tomorrow."

Early Saturday he took a bus and arrived in Orlando about 7 a.m. When he registered at a hotel, the management called The Orlando Sentinel-Star to report he had been found.

Collins was bright and jovial on his arrival. But he said: "I'm sorry I caused all this worry in the press, to my family, and friends."

ROSSELLINI SEEKS CHILDREN'S CUSTODY

ROME (AP) — Roberto Rossellini has asked the Rome Civil Court to give him custody of the three children of his marriage to Ingrid Bergman because of the Swedish actress' "relationship with Lars Schmidt."

Miss Bergman, whose marriage to the Italian film director has not yet been formally dissolved under Italian law, was married to Schmidt in London last Sunday.

When she and Rossellini obtained a legal separation in November 1957 custody of the three children was awarded to Miss Bergman.

A petition filed with the Civil Court last week by Rossellini's lawyer asks that he be reversed.

The children are Roberto, born seven days before Ingrid's divorce by proxy in Mexico from Peter Lindstrom in 1950, and 6-year-old twins, Isabella and Isotta Ingrid. They last were reported in Paris.

Traffic Death Toll Drops; Homeward Rush Will Tell Story

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The holiday traffic death rate eased up late Saturday but safety officials said the homeward rush will determine whether the 1958 Christmas weekend will set any bloody fatality record.

"The homeward rush will tell the story," said a spokesman for the National Safety Council.

"If the present fatality rate continues, the toll not only could fall below the all-time record set in 1956 but could come close to our preholiday estimate."

The latest statement was the first since the holiday began in which the council expressed the possibility the final toll could approximate the 620 deaths it predicted for the four-day period.

The council cautioned the fatalities still were climbing at a rate ahead of the pace which would result in the 620-death estimate.

In an earlier statement, the council said improved traffic behavior accounted for the slowdown in recent hours. If there is continued improvement, the council continued, "there is no reason why a record should be set."

Three members of one family died in a head-on automobile collision near Ottawa Saturday night, boosting Illinois' Christmas holiday traffic death toll to 22.

Nearly 24 hours had gone by without a fatal accident in the state when the multiple-death crash occurred.

Killed in the collision were Airman Laverne Downing, his wife, and their 19-month-old daughter, Anna Lynn Downing. Their son, Ray, 12, and Elizabeth Corrie, 19, of Ottawa, driver of the other car, were critically injured.

Business Losses Rise As Newspaper Strike Continues

NEW YORK (AP) — Economic casualties still mounted Saturday in this newspaper-bereft city.

"Irretrievable losses to many lines of business," is the way the New York Board of Trade sums up the fiscal results of the prolonged newspaper shutdown.

The damage probably runs to more than $50 million dollars so far.

With the 16-day strike headed for a possible end Sunday night, the newspaper industry has suffered a setback estimated unofficially at about $30 million dollars in circulation and advertising revenues alone.

On top of this, nearly 20,000 editorial and mechanical workers, laid off because of the immobilizing strike of deliveries, have lost about five million dollars in pay.

The Commerce Department has estimated retail stores, deprived of normal advertising channels during the heavy Christmas shopping season, consequently missed about seven per cent of their sales potential.

WHY ALL THE FUSS?

British Pound Sterling Is Still Relied On As Standard Measurement For Currency

LONDON (AP) — Why the fuss all over the world about the British pound? About convertibility? And about the sterling area? Why should an island located off the coast of a mighty continent be able to set the world's financial capitals aflame with a single announcement?

Britain is world power, but only a shadow of what she was 100 years ago.

Her economy is strong and productive — but nothing compared with the industrial giants to her East and West.

Why should her currency—the bills her people carry in their wallets—determine the actions of financial brains in the farthest corners of the world?

The answer lies in a fact about international trade: Over one-half of all the world's purchases are paid for with the British pound sterling.

This includes not only Britain's own trade and that of her commonwealth, but other countries of the world—on both sides of the Iron Curtain — trading among themselves.

The pound may be—and often is — the means of payment for transactions in which Britain takes no part at all.

So any change in the value of the pound sterling, or any action which is likely to make people more anxious to have pounds, will affect most of the trade deals throughout the world.

How did it happen that the currency of one country—especially the 75th smallest country in the world—should come to dominate world trade?

Historical reasons: Britain was a trading center in the Middle Ages. Pioneering the industrial revolution, she spread her capital all over the world so that people could buy British manufactured goods—paying for them in sterling, of course.

Practical reasons: In the big trading days of the 19th Century, the pound was convenient, like a traveler's check. It was accepted anywhere. It was safe — Britain suffered no revolutions during the century. It was backed by "offices"—the British empire countries—all over the world.

The essence of a strong international currency, like a traveler's check, is that it must be freely exchangeable for any other form of currency a person might want.

Until 1959, the pound always was freely convertible. It remained so strong—even during the hard days

Expect Wide Finance, Trade Repercussions

LONDON (AP) — Western Europe plunged Saturday into gigantic monetary and economic readjustments. The outstanding features were a large extension of convertibility of the British pound and devaluation of the French franc.

These two moves were followed swiftly by a liberalization of financial policies in other states. France, Western Germany, Denmark, Holland, Norway, Italy, Sweden, Belgium and Luxembourg joined Britain in the convertibility parade. Most of them announced that their currencies would be convertible as of Monday.

The British action, benefiting mostly nonresidents, means that large sums in pounds held in Britain by foreign residents may be converted into dollars or other currencies at a single official rate. This is $2.72 to $2.82 to the pound, generally $2.80.

The immediate effect of the franc devaluation—from 420 to 493.7 to the dollar—will be to give the American tourist on the Champs Elysees an extra 15 cents in spending money when he converts his dollar. For the Frenchman the new move adds up to less spending money.

The overall readjustments in Britain, France and the rest of Europe were expected to cause widespread repercussions in trade and finance. The European Payments Union, a scheme enabling European nations to defer full payment of sums they owe each other, goes out of existence.

EPU is replaced by the European Monetary Agreement, which will insist on full payments. EMA does set up a 600-million-dollar fund to give short-term credits to nations with unfavorable trade balances.

In some quarters it was believed the British move to make sterling a more attractive currency might touch off a trade war between Britain and six nations — France, Western Germany, Italy, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg—which will put their common market plan into operation Jan. 1.

This is a scheme aimed at an eventual common tariff area and the welding together of a solid trading bloc.

Britain, because of special commitments to its partners in the Commonwealth, has kept out of the common market plan. There were charges on the continent that Britain was out to torpedo the whole scheme of making its money readily convertible.

A British Treasury spokesman denied any such intent, saying the liberalization of convertibility was a result of factors which have been building up for some years.

The British changes were made with the full understanding of France and West Germany, and France actually urged us to advance our plans a little to make them coincide with its own readjustments," he said.

The British Treasury radiated optimism. A spokesman said the big step toward complete convertibility—a distant goal — is good news not only for Britain but for the continental nations which are

Batista, Castro Appear Headed For Showdown

HAVANA, Cuba (AP) — President Fulgencio Batista Saturday shook up the army command to counter a growing rebel threat to his government.

Informed sources in Havana are convinced that climactic developments are imminent in the two-year-old rebellion led by Fidel Castro.

Some government troops are reported balking at the prospect of a bloody all-out offensive against fellow Cubans in the civil strife that already has brought heavy casualties, economic dislocation and hunger to parts of the country.

Batista ordered 2,000 fresh troops to the province of Las Villas under a new commander. The army warned the civil population that it intends all-out ground and air attack against any rebel attempts to occupy and hold the central province. The rebels are active in a wide circle around Santa Clara, the provincial capital.

In eastern Cuba's Oriente Province, much of it now in virtually undisputed control of the rebels, the Roman Catholic Church declared that hunger is stalking the population and issued a Christmas season appeal for peace in the civil war.

Highly placed persons in Havana admit the government is severely hampered by lack of sufficient arms and ammunition. The United States is accused of helping the rebel cause by embargoing sales of arms to the government. Smuggled arms, mostly from the United States are reaching the insurgents in increasing quantities.

The government has other difficulties in countering the drive of the rebels, who now boast they intend to be in Havana soon. Some government troops are reported apathetic and suspicious. Their officers are accused of enriching themselves during the revolution. Only Friday a reliable source reported Col. Florentino Guerra, who has been chief of the country's rebel forces, left the country aboard his luxurious yacht.

The rebel movement has grown in two years from a handful of fugitives in Oriente's Sierra Maestra Mountains to a force of armed men which may number more than 8,000.

WILL CONTINUE B58 JET PROGRAM WITH 10% CUT

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force has decided to continue its B58 supersonic jet bomber program but to cut by about 10 per cent the purchases planned for the current year, military sources said Saturday.

Enough money will be sought during the fiscal year which starts next July 1, the sources said, for two additional wings of B52 long-range jet bombers.

Both plans reflect an Air Force decision to push forward with manned aircraft production while still seeking perfection of Intercontinental Ballistic Missiles.

Iowa was named after a Sioux Indian tribe whose name meant "one who puts to sleep."

Loony Larcenies: 1958

Justice Balanced Scales;
Pickled Peppers Pilfered

By MEADER G. PADDINGTON
NEA Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (NEA)—They still haven't stolen the bathtub yet. But one of 1958's Loony Larcenies managed to get as far as the bathroom scales.

Unfortunately, he didn't get much further with them than a magistrate's court in London, where he plaintively told the judge: "I don't know why I did it. I don't have a bathroom."

And while justice weighs that irony, consider these items on the year's roster of Tomfoolery Thievery:

● A peculiar pilferer probably named Peter pilfered a peck of pickled peppers from a New Haven, Conn., cellar.

● In Covington, Ky., the loot included five furnaces—and two front porches.

In the heavy goods department, top honors went to two men arrested in Ogden, Utah, for stealing a 166-ton diesel switching locomotive.

For sheer audacity, the medal went to a little old lady who walked into a mid-town New York City bank armed only with a glass of colorless liquid and threatened to throw acid at a teller unless he gave her $3,000. He obliged, and the little old lady disappeared in the milling throng of shoppers while Christmas cards drowned out the bank's alarm.

Love and marriage was the inspiration for a couple of shoplifters. One who was arrested in Johnson City, Tenn., was found to be carrying two cartons of cigarettes, two pipes, four watchbands, four pairs of eyeglasses, 11 pocket knives, 25 drill bits, a safety razor—and a ring and marriage license.

In Milwaukee, a bride-to-be was caught shoplifting a wedding ring.

There was poetic justice of sorts, too.

In Milwaukee, a burglar who masked his face with one of his baby's diapers was nabbed robbing the Bottoms-Up Tavern.

In Jersey City, a forger awaiting trial scribbled this verse: "I bounced a check, a cop bounced me; the judge said, 'Son, you'll do about three.'" The judge confirmed his prophecy.

In Paterson, N.J., a father who told his son in jest to "go rob a bank" found out later the boy had done just as he was told.

In Columbus, Ohio, a house-breaker stole a television set, tried to sell it to a filling station proprietor, found himself ducking with the set's original owner.

In Columbus, Ohio, a house-breaker stole a television set, tried to sell it to a filling station proprietor, found himself ducking with the set's original owner.

And in Japan, a thief making off with a radar reflector at a U.S. Air Base was detected on the radar screen and caught.

The old wheeze about "nobody here but us chickens" was topped in 1958 by:

● A New Britain, Conn., man, caught up a cherry tree, who explained he was looking for apples.

● A house burglar in Vancouver, B.C., who argued, when identified by his victim, "How can you be sure? It was so dark I couldn't recognize you."

● And a Washington, D.C., truck driver, arrested for stealing three tons of hotel and restaurant table cloths, who rationalized, "I only took the really dirty ones."

The meanest larcenists of the year, after lifting $20 from the cash register of a Washington dairy products shop, relieved a 12-year-old boy customer of two pints of ice cream and 31 cents.

And the softest-hearted safe crackers operated in Bluefield, Va., where they took $400 from a supermarket but filled the store's Heart Fund container with dimes before they left.

It takes a thief to catch a thief, you'll remember. But how about the Tokyo detective, assigned to prevent purse snatching on commuter trains, who was arrested for snatching a purse on a crowded commuter train? Or the manager of a Miami firm that protected businessmen from phony check passers who was sought by police for passing phony checks?

The man to ask might be Sherlock Holmes.

In Richmond, Va., a fellow by that name reported the theft of his automobile.

SHOW FOR GENEVIEVE
NEW YORK (AP)—Genevieve, the French singer who won attention on the Jack Paar television show, may come to Broadway in a musical especially tailored to her talents.

George Abbott, veteran producer-director-author, has invited the dark-haired girl (full name Genevieve Auger) to head the cast in a show which he is now writing with John Allen.

Genevieve has toured the domestic scene in a road production of "Can-can," where she enacted the role created on the White Way by another one-name Parisienne, Lile.

Uncle Sam Goes Deeper In Red
In 1958 Than In Any Peace Year

By FRANK CORMIER
WASHINGTON (AP)—Spending has a way of happening, whether you like it or not. Ask Uncle Sam.

His budget is deeper in the red than ever before in peacetime. Yet even as he plans to economize, experts tell him he's spending more than his budget indicates.

For the third time since last summer, government economists have increased their estimates of future federal outlays for goods and services.

These are the estimates that give an advance clue to the government's contribution to national output. The fact that they have again been raised indicates federal spending will continue to add zip to the business recovery for at least the next six months.

Beyond next July the outlook is clouded because it will be several weeks before President Eisenhower sends Congress his new budget for the 1960 fiscal year that begins July 1. A lot depends too on what Congress does to that budget.

The odds are, however, that federal spending will remain a significant prop under the economy throughout 1959.

In the current fiscal year, the government is spending roughly 80 billion dollars. This compares with about 72 billions in the last bookkeeping year.

About two-thirds of this spending is for goods and services—missiles, trucks, office machines, buildings, pay for federal employees, etc. Money spent in this fashion moves directly into the economy.

Six months ago, government economists estimated that federal purchases of goods and services would reach an annual rate of 53 billion dollars by next June.

Now they say it probably will be closer to 56½ billions by June. Even if Congress and the administration hold the line on spending in fiscal 1960, a mere continuation of the projected April-June level would produce an average of 56½ billion dollars for calendar 1959.

That would mean an increase of about 3½ billion dollars over the 1958 average—enough to be a significant plus factor in the 1959 economy.

With a $12,200,000,000 deficit forecast for the current fiscal year, the new Congress will hear plenty of talk about economy in government.

As in 1958, however, the administration and Congress may discover that spending tends to happen faster than expected.

Mrs. William B. Sallie, Jr.

Evalee Turner And William Sallie, Jr. United At Literberry Baptist Church

Arrangements of fern framed by candelabra holding red and white tapers provided the setting Sunday afternoon, December twenty-first, for the double ring ceremony uniting Miss Evalee Turner and William B. Sallie, Jr. of this city. The Rev. William J. Boston officiated at the holiday service at Literberry Baptist church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Turner of route three and the groom the son of Dr. and Mrs. T. R. Cooper, 127 City Place.

Miss Glenniss Dickman of Jacksonville attended the bride as maid of honor and James France of Crawfordville, Indiana was the best man. Archie Turner, brother of the bride, and Joseph Kingston served as ushers.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her floor length gown of tulle and net was worn over tulle. The bodice featured a rounded neckline, outlined by tulle rosettes and long sleeves.

The bouffant skirt was designed with tulle rosettes peeking through the folds of the tulle and net overskirts.

The flowing chapel length veil was held in place by a coronet of seed pearls. She wore a double strand of pearls, a gift from the groom. A white Bible, covered with white carnations, completed the traditional white wedding attire.

Miss Dickman wore a red chiffon waist length gown with lace top and tiny self bows down the back. Her small hat of red velvet and net with red slippers carried out the red and white combination. She carried white carnations.

Mrs. Turner, mother of the bride, wore gray lace over pink. Black accessories and pink carnations complemented her costume.

Mrs. Cooper, mother of the groom, was dressed in pink and white. She wore a corsage of red roses.

Miss Mary Kay McGinnis played a prelude of Christmas music before the wedding party entered the church. Mrs. John McGinnis sang "I Love You Truly" and "Because."

Church Reception

Red and white predominated at the reception held at the church following the ceremony. The hall was decorated for the Christmas season with pine boughs and Christmas ornaments.

Turkey Dinner

Served Malta

Shrine Members

The regular meeting of Malta Shrine 51 was held Friday, December 19, with Lucille Hagaman, W. H. P. and Leroy Wurtsbaugh, WOS, presiding.

A delicious turkey dinner was enjoyed preceding the meeting. The dining room was beautifully decorated in keeping with the Christmas season, with the tables carrying out the Christmas theme also.

During the ceremonial Tamar Burch, Ruth Ranson, Margaret Clayton, Mildred Cruse, Norma Jean English, Marguerite Huggins, Janet Pires, and Louella Corine Lashmet were received into the Order.

The dinner was planned by Ruth Robinson, chairman, Eunice Gotschall co-chairman, and their committee Lucille Hagaman, Shirley Stallings, Ruth Walters and committee were in charge of the beautiful and attractive table decorations.

The next regular meeting will be held Friday, January 16, at which time the past officers will be honored.

In making cream of tomato soup, thickening the tomato juice of the milk before combining them lessens the tendency to curdle.

The bride's table, covered with a red cloth and a white runner, held a three tiered cake decorated with holly berries and leaves. The same greenery was used to frame the base of the cake. Guests enjoyed cake, punch, minis and nuts.

Assisting with the serving were Mrs. Florence Brunk, Mrs. Joseph Schwager, Miss Anna Louise Reinhardt, Miss Paulette Turner, Mrs. Rodney Preston and Mrs. Arthur Pickle. Mrs. Roland Howe registered guests.

Mr. Sallie is a student at Washburn College and his bride is employed at Hamilton's Restaurant. The couple will make their home at 552 Hardin.

Your Children Need After-School Snacks

By DOROTHY V. WHIFFLE, M.D.

Almost every child wants something to eat when he comes home from school in the afternoon. Teen-age youngsters especially are famished by mid-afternoon. They raid the ice-box, the cookie jar, the breadbox, and sometimes they eat up what you had planned to serve the family for dinner. These snacks often interfere with appetites for dinner, especially if the snacks are mostly sweets. Then the youngster passes up the good, nourishing food you have prepared for him and you begin to worry about his health.

This is a little problem that exists in nine families out of ten all across the country. Some families just live with it, nagging sometimes when mother becomes especially annoyed. Some families try to forbid food in the mid-afternoon, others supply a bowl of fruit and hope the youngsters will be satisfied with that—usually they are not.

Why not just face the facts. Kids are hungry after school, but you also want them to eat enough good body building foods to keep them in robust health.

Plan Ahead

Prepare for an after school meal. Label one shelf in your refrigerator "Mabel" or "Tom." Every morning when you are cleaning up after breakfast put something good on that shelf. Something that tastes good and that the child likes and something that is good for him—not cake or pie or heavy sweets but good protein food, cheese, hard boiled eggs or maybe even deviled eggs, a piece of cold meat. Add a piece or two of fruit and something to drink, either milk or fruit juice. Make that shelf something the youngster looks forward to. Explain to him why you don't want him to fill up on sweets just a little while before dinner. He will cooperate especially if he enjoys the food you fix for him.

If he eats a little less at dinner there is nothing to worry about, because the food he has had in the afternoon was as good for him as the dinner food.

Appreciation

Every last one of us likes to have others do things for us. It makes us all feel good inside to know that someone cares enough about us to go to trouble for us. Your teen-ager will appreciate your efforts and you can often improve your relationship with your often rebellious adolescent by going to some trouble to fix him a good after school snack.

Of course you may find that you are appreciated not only by your own child but by the neighborhood as well. Not only the trouble of preparing the food, but the expense can become considerable. If you find you're feeding an army, put up a little box and simply say the expense is getting you down and you would appreciate a few contributions. Let them give you what they'd otherwise spend in the corner drugstore. They'll do it and your child will be the envy of the crowd for having such a swell mother.

WISCONSIN COFFEE

STURGEON BAY, Wis. (AP) — The most exotic tree in Door County is a full-size coffee tree grown by Lonnie Kopitake, Ellison Bay high school youth.

The tree bore its first crop last spring and recently produced its second crop, several hundred beans.

Lonnie's father, editor of the weekly Door Reminder, plans to serve his son's own brand of coffee to the local Lions Club.

Better Homemaking— They're Telling More About Furniture

King-size swatches of material aid in selecting upholstery fabric. Fabric color bar, background, holds over 250 selections. Sofa and chair, shown, are from a line which introduces new construction methods.

BY KAY SHERWOOD
NEA Staff Writer

When the old sofa sags like a hammock and the upholsterer shakes his head sadly and suggests a decent burial, you may as well give yourself for the hunt for a replacement.

Shopping for a new sofa, or lounge chair, presents a special challenge. While we search our minds for intelligent questions to ask the salesman about construction, quality, fabric and durability, we know that a lot of the answers are hidden under the fabric.

When we finally settle on a style we like, the next job is to select a covering fabric from a swatch book.

How a few square inches of fabric will look multiplied to cover several hundred square inches of cloth is not easy to visualize, even for a professional.

A pretty pumpkin shade in a swatch may look more like a Western sunset on a 90-inch sofa in your living room.

Progress is being made to give the consumer more of a break. More informative booklets are being written to instruct the salesmen in new construction methods, in the differences between various filling materials, in fabric qualities.

Trade publications give them detailed style and color information about new furniture.

A COLORFUL CHANGE in marketing a new line of furniture greatly reduces the chance of error in choosing fabrics.

This furniture, which is built on a new principle by an old-time, long-established bedding firm is in the moderately high price range.

The selection includes eight sofas and nine lounge and occasional chairs. They're simple, basic styles in modern, provincial or traditional design.

To give the shopper more than a bird's-eye view of upholstery fabric choices, the manufacturer uses a 10-foot fabric color bar.

It holds about 250 swatches, each 13 inches wide by 54 inches long, long enough to drape over the back and seat of a piece.

The bar is arranged in a spectrum-like display of color. Fabric range from polished cotton prints to linens, velvets, and damasks.

The quality in the samples is fingered is excellent.

CONSTRUCTION is new, too. Steel and wood combine to make the frame extremely strong. There is a steel grid base with concealed torque springs to adjust the pitch of the seat according to the weight of the person.

On the base is a removable cushion of individually packed coil springs and on top of this a seat cushion which is of form rubber or dacron or down over foam rubber.

Most sofas have three-cushion seats.

The fact that both top and supporting cushions can be removed means easier and more thorough cleaning.

This new type of construction does increase the weight of the piece.

Hank Makes Music With VIPs WOMAN SONG WRITER PUTS RHYTHM INTO D.C. SCENE

BY ALICIA HART
NEA Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—(NEA)—Of the hundreds of thousands of words that are printed and spoken each year about Washington personalities, none are cherished more by them than those of a bright-eyed, feminine dynamo with a southern drawl.

The energetic gal is Tennessee-born Eleanor Hankins Fort, better known to her friends as just "Hank." And the words that have made her so popular around this publicity-saturated town are the lyrics she has composed for more than 150 songs.

Hank is the author of such hit numbers as "Put Your Shoes on Lucy," "I Didn't Know the Gun Was Loaded," and "Save Your Confederate Money Boys." But the songs for which she's best known here are the ones about prominent headline personalities that she writes for parties, birthday celebrations and other special events.

VIPs and other personalities who have been the subjects of Hank's light, clever lyrics include House Speaker Sam Rayburn, Washington socialite Mrs. Herbert May (the former Marjorie Merriweather Post) and lovely Ruth Eisenhower, the President's niece.

Hank's knack for describing people in musical verse has made her one of the most sought-after party guests in town. Hostesses usually consider arrangements for a big shindig incomplete until they have guarantee from Hank to write a song about the guest of honor.

But the fact that Hank always shows up with a delightful, original number completely baffles friends who know her working habits.

That's because she never starts composing a song until just before it's time for the party to start.

Hank says that she works best by putting off a composing job until the last minute. "I like to work under pressure," she explains.

When she realizes that she can't postpone the work any longer, Hank explains, "I go through a horrible panic." But out of all the anxiety always comes the exact words and music that she wants.

The vivacious, former night club entertainer completely pooh-poohs the idea that her rapid-fire composing ability should make her feel extra smart. "A talent is a gift," she explains. "And when someone gives you a gift, you should just feel grateful."

Hank's activity in Washington social circles is not restricted to being a guest at other people's parties. Actually she's considered one of the best hostesses in town.

Her parties, which she calls "Howdy-Do's," are strictly informal get-togethers where the accent is on having fun instead of talking politics or making important business contacts.

Hank can usually be found at the piano, surrounded by senators, congressmen, diplomats and an occasional Hollywood celebrity, singing her latest compositions. She has recently recorded 14 of her favorite numbers on a long-playing record which is simply titled "Hank."

In addition to writing songs and maintaining her active social life, Hank runs a dancing school for youngsters in Nashville, Tenn., which she visits every month. She also owns half-interest in a music publishing company.

"I'm going to paint when I get too old to go anything else," she explains. "But I don't know when I'd ever admit that I had reached that age."

BYGONE REMINDER

NEW YORK (AP)— Amid the backstage clutter of one small New York theater is the last trace in town of a bygone era—a gaslight control board.

The cumbersome array of pipes and valves enabled one stagehand to dim the houselights and illuminate the dramatic action prior to the advent of electricity.

The theater, used by the Blackfriars Guild for its annual season of plays, boasts another odd relic. The main curtain, a heavily tasseled golden affair, originally was used at the New York World's Fair of 1939 for a show featuring Gypsy Rose Lee.

TWO 'ANTIGONES'

The Greek tragedy by Sophocles and a modern dress version by French Dramatist Jean Anouilh are to be presented on alternate evenings.

Plenty Of Newsprint This Year; Predict Consumption Hike In '59

By WALTER BUSSEWITZ
AP Business News Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—U.S. newspaper publishers had no problem getting enough newsprint in 1958.
There was such a bulge of supply over demand the North American newsprint producers paused in their big expansion programs.
The U.S. and Canadian mills were able to serve their customers without drawing on around 15 per cent of capacity.

Consumption should rise in 1959, along with the expected improvement in the nation's economy. But producers are sure they can handle even a sudden strong spurt in demand.

The American Newspaper Publishers Assn. reported consumption for much of this year ran about 4 per cent under 1957.
During the past two years,
North American newsprint manufacturers carried out a 350-million dollar expansion, which boosted productive capacity by 20 per cent.

Despite the growth of newsprint manufacturing in the U.S., the domestic industry still is less than one-third the size of Canada's.

Newsprint is selling on a contract basis in New York at a delivered price of $134 a ton. The last general boost of $4 a ton came in March 1957.

As the year neared its end, Sir
Eric Bowater, head of Bowater Paper Corp., was asked about the future of newsprint prices. He said:

"Somebody has got to absorb the ever increasing costs of production and distribution, a tendency that never seems to stop. It's not true to say I'm contemplating it, but a rise in prices is needed."

Man Who Wants A Longer Life Had Better Get Himself A Wife

THEY'LL LIVE LONGER: Statistics show that American husbands and wives enjoy more years on earth than single, divorced or widowed men and women.

By RAY CROMLEY
NEA Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—(NEA)—Young men . . . old men . . . middle-aged men! It pays to get married.

At least in France and the United States, that is.

Statisticians at the National Office of Vital Statistics have put together a lot of figures that present a fairly convincing case.
They've been corroborated by data from the French Institut National de la Statistique et des Etudes Economiques.

French figures show that a young married man of 36 can expect to live six years longer than his unmarried — or divorced—cousin.

The American figures show that an unmarried or divorced man of 35 to 44 has two-and-a-half times as great a chance of dying this year as does his married brother.

Even an American unmarried 75-year-old has almost a 40 per cent greater chance of dying than if he were married.

There are a lot of theories as to what this means. The Americans have some pretty complicated and stodgey ones. The French, however, simply say of the married man:

"He is less inclined to yield to all sorts of temptations."

And it may be said, even the American statisticians seem to bear out the French theory.

It should be mentioned in passing, that married women live longer, too, than unmarried women, both in France and in the United States.

What then do these married men and women get out of married life? Here are the astounding details.

Strange as it may seem, married men apparently have fewer ulcers than unmarried men. At least fewer married men die of them. And fewer married men die of hypertension. Furthermore, fewer widowers die of ulcers than men who have never been married. As for women; very few women have ulcers anyway, married of single, divorced or widowed.

Single men have a greater chance of being murdered, or of dying of pneumonia, tuberculosis, cancer and heart disease.

Three times as many widowers commit suicide as their married friends.

Until they reach 50, single men are more likely to die of hernia.
After 50, there's no advantage in being married as far as hernia is concerned.

The way it looks from the figures, more married women than single drink themselves to death.
With men, it's the other way around. But before concluding that marriage is bad for a woman's nerves, note that the drinking-to-death rate goes up sharply for women who are widowed or divorced. Except for divorced women over 75.

More divorced men are anemic.
Apparently at any age from 20 to 80, a single man has twice as great a chance of being killed in an automobile accident as a married man. Widowers have an even harder time staying alive in autos. And a divorced man of 75 has three times the chance of dying in a car as his married friends of the same age.

For a woman, however, there are times when it's safer for her to be single when in an automobile—under 20 and between 34 and 69. From then on it's safer for her to be a widow, as far as cars are concerned.

By and large, married women apparently get — statistically—fewer benefits than their married husbands.

There are, apparently some disadvantages to being married.
More married women are murdered. More die of diabetes and appendicitis.

Married men have a worse time with gonorrhea.

However, compared with married women, almost two times as many widows die of heart disease, two to three times as many di-vorcees die in auto accidents, four times as many widows are murdered, four times as many divorcees commit suicide.

Some women researchers have concluded it is better for men to get married and better for women to stay single. But if a woman does marry it is better for her not to become a widow.

CUT IN PAY BY CHOICE
NEW YORK (AP)—Peggy Mc-
Cay, who used to collect $40,000 annually as a star of television daytime serials, is working now in an off Broadway stage production for $85 a week—deliberately.

"While money is a many splen-dored thing," she explains, "It is all wrong to make it your goal as an actress. I did soap opera for four years and while I was getting rich, I wasn't enjoying being an actress. It was nothing more than daily drudgery."

Miss McCay got the stage bug two seasons ago in a production of "Uncle Vanya." She has returned to the same theater now for a part in "The Failures."

Her sole income, however, does not come from the stage work. Her late father was president of a large construction company. Since his death two years ago, she and her mother have been running the business as specialists in building schools.

Going out of business sales may soon be scarce in this city.

CHICAGO (AP)—The butcher hog market was steady to 25 cents or more higher this week on rather sharply curtailed offerings and firmer wholesale pork prices.

The supply under 220 lb weights again was relatively small. Demand by both packers and shipper continued good throughout the period with most active bidding on the lighter weights.

Pork prices advanced as much as $2 a hundredweight on wholesale markets.

The cattle run was well below comparable trading days of last week, and for the first three days of the week it was down about 25 per cent.

About 75 per cent of the offerings were slaughter steers which advanced 50 cents to $1.50 a hundredweight. However, heavy weights held steady.

On Wednesday the top price for a few loads of prime steers scaling 1,600 lbs was $30.25, the highest in about six months.

The market for slaughter lambs was active throughout the week with all interests in the trade and clearance complete before noon of each day at prices 25 to 75 higher. A 50 cent gain Monday was the first market advance here since the last week of November.

New York Stock Market

By ED MORSE
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—A surprising Christmas Eve rally pulled the stock market out of the doldrums this week and put The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at another record high.

Oils were unsettled by news that Venezuela is raising its share of the profits on oil produced there to 60 per cent from 50 per cent but this was about the only major news affecting Wall Street.

The AP 60-stock average rose 70 cents to $210.60, topping the previous record of $210.10 reached Dec. 10.

The most important market development was the ability of stock prices to rise on Wednesday when all signs and portents pointed to considerable profit taking.

Prices had fallen on diminishing volume for three straight sessions, including Friday of the prior week. By Monday and Tuesday trading was the lightest since early September.

To market analysts it seemed that the Christmas Eve session would bring more of the same. Besides being the last trading day before a four-day market holiday, Wednesday had another distinction: it was the first trading session on which profits taken could be entered on income tax returns for 1959, thus postponing for a full year the day of reckoning with Uncle Sam.

Another surprise in the holiday-shortened week was a restoration by the rail section, which rose to a new 1958 high in the AP average.

U.S. Government bonds closed mixed this holiday week while corporate securities declined. Utilities and industrials were off sharply while foreign dollar lines drifted lower. Investment quality issues and rails were steady.

Corporate trading volume slipped to $17,741,639 net value on the Big Board from $24,850,000 the previous week and $21,015,200 for the corresponding week a year ago.

112.25 INCH RAIN

DELICES LAUDERDALE
FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP)—A drenching rain poured 11.25 inches of water on this south Florida resort Friday.

Barbicanes were thrown up in the downtown area where water had collected to depths of 30 inches at low spots, police said.

The rain subsided near midnight. Police Sgt. Harold Brewer described the deluge as "a lot of inconvenience" but said no injuries had been reported.

South America's Lake Titicaca belongs partly to Bolivia and partly to Peru.

GRAIN FUTURES PRICES DECLINE

By GIL MAYO
AP Business News Writer

CHICAGO (AP)—The decline in grain futures prices this week was the sharpest generally in more than two months, carrying almost half the contracts to new lows for the season.

Only the July and September rye deliveries attracted steady support and were the only ones to come through with gains. They were small, attributed mainly to the opinion that supplies of the grain may become rather tight before the next harvest.

All wheat, most corn, some oats, rye and soybean contracts closed the week's trading Wednesday noon at their season lows. Others were within a cent or two of their bottom prices. Wheat and corn slipped well over a cent a bushel for the week and in soybeans the setbacks ran to almost four cents with the extreme loss on September.

The government report on wheat and rye acreage seeded for harvest next spring was the major trading factor. It showed winter wheat plantings to be about a million acres more than a year ago which yielded a record crop.

The harvest outlook based on conditions Dec. 1, however, was for a 1959 winter wheat yield of 957 million bushels, compared with 1,179,924,000 this year. A 957-million-bushel harvest still would be the fifth largest of record and 17 per cent above average.

Wheat was 1 1/4-1 1/2 cents a bushel lower than at the close of the previous week, March 1944-45; corn 1 1/4-1 1/2 lower, March old type contract 1.13-1.14; oats 1-1 cent lower, March 64-65; rye 1/2 lower, to 1/2 higher, March 1.30-1.31; soybeans 1/4-3/4 lower, January $2.16-1.57.

Venezuela Calls Off Balloon Hunt of the Orinoco River in planes and helicopters expressed doubt the quilted plastic air bag carrying a crew of four had dropped in that region.

Arthur Cooke of The London Daily Mail, which financed the aerial expedition, said the last message he had received from the balloon was during the Christmas holiday giving a position in the midatlantic.

Cooke said in Trinidad Saturday morning that the message was garbled but that the balloonists had reported they were preparing a Christmas dinner.

The hunt centered at the mouth of the Orinoco River. This is 300 miles southwest of Barbados Island—target of the balloon on setting out two weeks ago from the Canary Islands.

Any landing in the steaming jungle along the Orinoco would be risky and difficult.

Experts in the Civil Aeronautics Administration said violent winds, frequent in the area, could sweep the balloon miles inland toward the mountain range between Orinoco and British Guiana.

First reports said that the crew of four, including one woman, were safe. The Venezuelan Communications Ministry said it had been informed of the report, but the Civil Aeronautics Authority said there had been no confirmation.

There was still another element of mystery. Radio listening posts on Barbados picked up a coded message indicating the balloon still was airborne after it was reported down.

A. B. Elliott, 51, British businessman leader of the aerial expedition, estimated at the start of the flight that it would take anywhere from two to three weeks to make the crossing.

Riding with Elliott were his son, Timothy, 21, a radio operator; Colin Mudie, 32, pilot, and Mudie's wife, Rosemary, 30, copilot and cook.

Their quilted plastic bag, with a capacity of 55,000 cubic feet of hydrogen, was well equipped. It carried a lifeboat if the balloon were forced down in water. They had enough food for three months.

The expedition, organized under the patronage of Britain's Prince Philip, was designed to study mainly wind currents in the Atlantic.

Back at the farm, they spent about an hour and a half hunting rabbits, but without bagging any.

Word to newsmen from his farm was that Eisenhower and his grandson, both totting shotguns, flushed a few rabbits but did not get any shots. Saturday was the opening day of the rabbit hunting season.

Eisenhower, who drove to Gettysburg from Washington Friday, plans to remain at his farm through New Year's Day.

Europe Overhauls Money System

making or planning similar moves.

"British sterling, which already finances more than half the world's international trade, will become more useful," he said.

The change could be made at any time, he added, because Britain's liabilities in sterling have fallen sharply and its reserves in dollars and other foreign currencies have risen in an almost spectacular manner.

But the influences at work here also were being felt on the continent. Other nations felt themselves able to extend the convertibility of their currencies, and obviously were waiting for Britain to make the first move.

Officials doubt whether the new regulations will materially change trade relations with Communist states, but they said that unless there are special circumstances, nationalities of Communist states qualify for convertibility.

Expanded convertibility, said one official, is merely one step toward the distant goal of "one world of trade and payments, a world of many-sided trade in which the consumer anywhere gets the widest possible choice of commodities for his money."

Here was the currency picture in other countries who joined the convertibility ranks:

The West German government declared the deutsche mark freely convertible for foreigners as of Monday. Payments between West Germany and any other foreign nation may be made in marks or any other kind of currency.

Oslo's Trade Ministry announced that beginning Monday Norway will extend the convertibility of Norwegian kroner for all countries except those with which Norway has bilateral payment agreements.

The convertibility of Belgian and Luxembourg currency, already effective for nationals for those two countries, will be extended to foreign owners of these currencies.

The Swedish government announced its decision to introduce full convertibility of Swedish kroner against U.S. dollars for foreign trade. The Stockholm decision does not affect the present restrictions for pure capital transactions.

The Italian Council of Ministers issued a decree making Italian lire more easily convertible with other currencies. It will also take effect Monday, from which time lire possessed by residents of countries outside the dollar bloc can be exchanged for dollars on the official Italian market.

The Danish government made the kroner convertible with the dollar as of Monday. New Approach To Urban Traffic-Transit Mess

Philadelphia's City-Railroad-Bus Cooperation Shows Some Success

By WARD CANNEL
NEA Staff Correspondent

PHILADELPHIA—(NEA)—Operation Northwest, Philadelphia's plan to wipe out the plague of cities—traffic congestion and commuter misery—has all the earmarks of failure.

● Participating railroads are losing more money than ever.
● So are participating buses.
● So is the general tax fund of Philadelphia.

But despite these facts, the plan may be a success, for within this test tube experiment now less than two months old, commuting is much easier and traffic congestion is dissolving.

And if the picture grows brighter as the Operation moves along, city planners may have finally made magic by throwing conventional economics into a cocked hat and pulled out a real live rabbit: transit that means civic health.

Operation Northwest works this way:

The Pennsylvania and Reading railroads, faced with rising costs and decreasing commuter traffic, have cut their fares by nearly 30 per cent and increased their services along their spur lines from the center of the city 10 miles to the northwest city limits.

Bus lines that fan out from the rail routes have altered schedules to meet the trains, and have reduced their fares for transfer passengers.

The city has guaranteed to make up operating losses. And the carriers have gambled on making up fare losses by enticing 30 per cent more passengers than they have been carrying.

The early results are staggeringly good.

John A. Bailey, Deputy City Manager, has the statistics at his fingertips like a man who has learned the facts of life the hard way.

"It's cheaper for a commuter to come into the center city by train now than it is for him to drive in—even if you discount every cost but parking. But if you want to count the other costs—the real costs—then:

"Philadelphians spend 550 million dollars each year for their cars and city traffic control. If everything is to be on rubber wheels, then we need more express highways. But how can you disperse peak-hour traffic into an already-jammed city?"

The answer, Bailey and his Traffic and Transportation Board are discovering, is an integrated transit system that would cost the city 11 million dollars per year.

"It's the only way we'll get our money's worth out of our auto expenses. Let's face it: peak-hour travel—commuter travel—must be public transportation and the public must pay the cost of the idle hours of the transit system. Otherwise the city can choke on its congestion."

A New Chiffon Wool For Resort Wear

A brand new lightweight wool weighing a mere two ounces makes its debut in this group of resort clothes by Nat Kaplan. The fabric is a worsted, is porous and crisp. We show it here in an all white (left) bolero dress which has free-swinging top over skirt which is attached to a silk lining. Cut of the collar is wide and open. Pocket trim on jacket is embroidered in for sweaters, both plain and fur-trimmed, for lightweight coats, for slacks and jackets.

Now we have the crisp resort dress in a chiffon wool worsted, light and crisp. It has all of the properties that have endeared wool to women for years. It resists wrinkles, holds its shape and is porous.

In the past, wool for sunny climates has been confined largely to wraps. It's been used dresses of casual elegance. Many of them are done in all-white with touches of gold as trim. But some are done in the pastels and there are even pastel prints in this sheer wool.

Travelers who know the West Indies equip themselves for many changes in climate. Weather that's hot and sunny during the day is equally crisp and cool in late afternoon and evening. As soon as the heat of the sun goes, around 4 p.m., a girl is ready for a dress that will ward off the breezes.

At night, a lightweight wrap is an absolute must. And if you're touring about an island, sight-seeing, the dress under that wrap might well be a chiffon wool.

MAEATH THEATER
NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP)—A theatrical marathon is the latest achievement of the Yale University School of Drama.

The opening plays of two famous trilogies written 2,500 years apart are being staged in January: the Agamemnon of Aeschylus and "The Homecoming" from "Mourning becomes Electra" by Eugene O'Neill.

Purpose of the twin bill, to underline similarities between the dramas, is enhanced by having the same undergraduates perform respective roles in each performance? Five hours.

ACCURACY PRIZED
NEW YORK (AP)—The producers of "Legend of Lizzie" are being sticklers for accuracy in their Broadway version of the famous 1892 trial of Lizzie Borden for the murder of her parents in Fall River, Mass.

They are offering free seats to all comers who have authentic stories and memorabilia concerning Miss Borden which would be helpful to the cast in increasing the realism of their work.

WALTER W. PATCHELL: "Philadelphia's problem is our problem."

vice president Walter W. Patchell. His calculations of costs match Bailey's to the penny.

"It costs 78 cents more per passenger round trip than the railroad ticket. But if he drives, his round trip costs $3.20 in highway building, maintenance and repair."

"The question is not how to transport commuters at the highest profit, but how to keep the city healthy at the lowest cost."

Patchell is pleased as pie at the slice his Operation has taken out of the traffic mess. But he is clearly not going to encourage all American cities to follow his plan. It is applicable, he says, only to cities that grew up before the growth of auto traffic—cities that have sprawled away from a center city.

Patchell is also ready to admit that in his long career with the Pennsylvania, he has helped strip the line of its service to commuters in city after city.

"It wasn't economical," he said. "And besides, we could get away with it in those days. Well, we can't get away with it any more. And Philadelphia's problem is our problem."

Auburn Trips Flashes In Thriller, Kincaid Wins At Waverly

WAVERLY — Auburn used a pair of charity tosses by Saturday's hero, Bartolazzi, to move in to the second round of the Waverly Tourney. The score was 49 to 47 and the only two points Bartolazzi gathered were in the final seconds of the tilt but to the Trojans they were the most important of the season.

Auburn moved to an eight point advantage at the close of the third frame but the Flashes fought back to tie the score with one minute remaining and set the stage for the dramatic moment. Ken McMurdo topped Auburn scorers with 20 points and Dick Rawlins was tops for the Flashes with 14 tallies.

Nightcap Victory
Kincaid had only five boys break into the scoring column in the opening round of the Waverly Tourney but that was enough to give them a 79 to 49 win over hapless Girard.

Joe Pop popped in 27 points to lead the Kincaid crew to victory and Wallner was high for the losers with 12 tallies. Kincaid held a 40 to 28 advantage at half time and at no time was in any trouble. Baletto contributed 19 points to the winning effort.

The Pretzels dominated the boards and hit a large percentage of their shots to command an 85-48 victory over Petersburg. Tim Sullivan of the Pretzels (32) battles Petersburg's Larry Rebbe (44) for a rebound under New Berlin's goal in the first quarter. Number 20 is Bob Vogt of the Bluejays and No. 45 is forward Bill Ishmael.

Other Pretzels looking on are Kurt McGinnis (50), Bob Bond (54) and Tim Sullivan (32). McGinnis and Sullivan led Pretzel scoring with 31 and 22 points respectively.

Pretzel fans watch with interest as their team overtakes an early 6-2 Petersburg lead in the initial chapter. Hovey's quintet gave the followers something to shout about with a 28-point fourth stanza. New Berlin meets the winner of the Routt-Central game in the Championship finale Tuesday night at 8:30 p.m.

The win kept New Berlin undefeated in nine outings. The Pretzels overcame a 6-2 lead in the first chapter and then coasted in with the victory. Elmo Hilderbrand's Bluejays trailed by 14 after three quarters but New Berlin used a blistering 28-point fourth period to erase any Petersburg hopes of catching up with the tourney favored Pretzels.

Three players broke into the double figures for the winners with Kurt McGinnis' 31 points, topping the scoring onslaught. Tim Sullivan of the Pretzels had 22. Larry Rebbe's 14 took individual scoring honors for the losers.

Both clubs were cool in the final period with only 15 points being totaled between the two teams. Surratt was high scorer for the Bearcats with eight tallies and Alexander led Arenzville with 13 points.

Central In Command
Central of Camp Point used a full court press to best advantage in downing Worden in the second round of the Routt Tourney by a score of 90 to 55. The Panthers' point output was the highest of the tourney so far and they certainly must be given championship consideration after this exhibition.

Worden played on even terms with the Panthers for one quarter and led at the end of the first period 20 to 18. Camp Point went into the full court at this point and broke the game wide open.

Worden was unable to cope with the press tactics and lost the ball a number of times in backcourt.

Maedje was high for the lasers for the second straight night with 14 points which was well under his previous games total. Lawless racked up 25 tallies for the winners with his driving lay ups.

Central will now meet the host Rockets on Monday night in a game that should be a thriller.

Two Electrical Doughnuts Ring Earth: Dr. Allen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Man gaily through space free from radiation worries if he learns how to avoid two huge electrical doughnuts that ring the earth, a cosmic ray expert said Saturday.

Dr. James A. Van Allen, head of the physics department at the University of Iowa, based that statement on the latest information from Army and Air Force space probes.

The earth seems to be "like a marble lying in the hole of a huge doughnut which in turn is encircled by another doughnut — both filled with dangerous radiation," Van Allen said.

He said the extent of the earth's magnetic field capable of holding small charged particles apparently is some 40,000 miles out.

Van Allen spoke at a meeting of the American Astronautical Society and talked with reporters. He provided detailed data from the Pioneer space probe fired moonward by the U.S. Army Dec. 6.

In 38 hours of flight the rocket streaked some 63,000 miles high and reported back good cosmic ray data almost all the way going out and coming back earthward, Van Allen said.

The first 2,000-mile thick doughnut extends from 1,400 miles to 3,400 miles above the earth, roughly in line with the equator.

The second doughnut is 4,000 miles thick. It begins 8,000 miles out and apparently ends 12,000 miles distant.

Van Allen said he would like to see the United States launch a satellite that would range 40,000 miles at its highest point and 300 miles at its lowest point in a roughly polar orbit around the earth. He hopes it would stay aloft for nearly a year and provide a detailed cross-section of the radiation belts.

The highest radiation encountered by Pioneer III was 25,000 counts per second—registered on the way down.

Bradley Crushes Gonzaga, 90-73

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — Bradley's fast-breaking Braves wrapped up their seventh basketball victory without defeat by romping past Gonzaga, 90-73 Saturday night.

The Braves, although never in serious trouble, did not gain complete control of the outcome until Jean LeFebvre, a 7-3 import from France, fouled out with a little more than eight minutes to play.

At that point the Braves had a 13-point lead and quickly ran up an 18-point advantage.

Both teams had phenomenal shooting percentages. Bradley hit 600 in the first half to 640 for the visitors. Bradley closed with 520 and Gonzaga 530.

Joe Billy McDade of Bradley, topped all scorers with 21 points, and Alphara Saunders had 15 for Bradley.

Frank Burgess was high for Gonzaga with 17 and LeFebvre had 13.

Miami Of Ohio Topples DePaul

CHICAGO (AP)—Miami of Ohio, playing steady basketball, defeated DePaul 74-67 Saturday night and used only seven players.

Miami grabbed a 38-33 lead at intermission after overcoming two earlier DePaul advantages.

DePaul, whittling away in the second half, took a short-lived 49-48 lead but Miami went in front to stay at 58-57 on a three-point play by Mark Zeller.

What To Wear—

Bright Colors Glint Across The Snow

BY DICK KLEINER

NEA Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK (NEA)—It's getting so the snow-covered ski slopes look like spring gardens. That's because skiers, who used to be conservative dressers, are blossoming out in all manner of bright outfits.

This is particularly true in the realm of bulky, all-American wool sweaters which comprise the main feature of most skiers' wardrobes. Time was when a skier wore black or nothing, and if you wear nothing while skiing you may not make the next slalom.

But nowadays you'll see very little black in ski sweaters. At the moment, the blues are the most popular colors, followed closely by the various reds. Then you'll see many ski sweaters in summery yellows and oranges and an occasional model with the unexpected (because they're rarely used in sportswear) shades of aquamarine and turquoise.

Of course, most of these are not solid. Generally, they're paired with white, gray, beige or, in some case, black. But even as a secondary color, black has for some reason or other fallen on dark days. And dark black is pretty sad-looking.

Regarding ski sweater styling, the most popular these days is the double sweater. That's the one that looks like two sweaters, but is really one comfortable garment. It can appear in many styles, itself, but all are selling well and you'll look great in them as they cart you off to the hospital.

There are interesting patterned effects being marketed now, done by tricky work in textured surfaces and dimensional rib knits. And textured striped effects are popular, too. Blazer stripes are also important, at the moment even outselling the traditional Scandinavian geometric patterns.

And so, if you're the skiing sort, be prepared with a rousing colorful wool sweater wardrobe. The snow will look like a rainbow—or, more accurately, a snowbow.

The latest in socks, as reported by the National Association of Hosiery Manufacturers:

The trend to match up socks with some other article of apparel continues to grow. You can find socks mated with handkerchiefs, ties, shirts, sweaters, even sports coats and suits.

There's more experimentation with blending various fibers—such combinations as nylon, dacron and silk and nylon, cotton and silk are available. The blends are being tried to reach an optimum of both appearance and wearability. For cold weather protection, sock manufacturers are blending synthetics (like dacron, orlon and nylon) with alpaca, lamb's wool and cashmere.

Dress socks, made from like or nylon but looking exactly like silk, are available. These are being made in the increasingly popular midcalf length (sometimes called "half-hose") which prevent any bare leg from peeking out when you cross your legs.

Innovations include some patterned sock tops—nonelastic, and thus nonbinding, yet they anchor the sock up without garters. There are also socks with solid white cotton soles, for men who need the protection of pure white but may have colored tops so nobody

Ski sweaters are getting gayer—in color and in style. Pictured is a sample of the dual sweater. It looks like a turtle-neck sweater under a sleeveless pullover.

Other socks have cushion soles. Finally, for the outdoorsman, there's the new "Thermal" socks, which are made from a special fabric that keeps body heat in. Hot dog!

Elliott Agrees Iowa Should Be Favored In Bowl

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—Coach Pete Elliott of the California Golden Bears agrees that Iowa should be favored to win the Rose Bowl game, but he's not about to admit it.

As for the 18 or 19 points quoted on the champion Hawkeyes of the Big Ten, Elliott said he is neither concerned nor perturbed at such odds.

Iowa's record of one loss and one tie during the regular season gives them an edge over the Bears' 7-3 record, in the eyes of the experts.

Elliott, who set up training shop in the Rose Bowl area Friday, said he is not one to make predictions about the outcome of a game.

Forest Evanshewski, Iowa's coach, from the outset branded the big point margin ridiculous, and hasn't changed his mind about California, which he calls "a good football team."

Both squads hold single work-outs today, each emphasizing defense and perfecting timing on offense.

WET COUNTRY DRY
MAYNARDVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—It's against the law to sell whiskey in legally wet Union County. Tennessee law permits liquor sales only in towns of 1,000 more and this East Tennessee county doesn't have one.

The county voted to go back in 1939, when Maynardville met the 1,000 requirement. But a population drop in the past years leave the country's largest town 400 residents shy of the legal mark.

Rookie Sparks Warriors In Climb To Top

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The headlong plunge of the Philadelphia Warriors to the lower depths of the National Basketball Assn.'s Eastern Division has been stopped and it took a rookie to do it.

Young Guy Rodgers, a former All-America from Temple, put on a great performance Friday night leading the Warriors to a 106-93 victory over the New York Knickerbockers at Hershey, Pa.

Rodgers scored 28 points, handed off a dozen assists and grabbed 11 rebounds.

Until they went into their tailspin a couple of weeks ago, the Warriors had compiled a 9-11 mark, which kept them within sight of the leaders. Now they are all but out of the running.

The Boston Celtics widened their lead in the Eastern Division by polishing off the Minneapolis Lakers, 107-91, and the Detroit Pistons whipped the Cincinnati Royals, 131-91, in a doubleheader in Detroit.

Bob Cousy and Frank Ramsey snuffed out a fourth quarter rally by the Lakers to lead the Celtics to their ninth straight triumph and 15th in their last 17 games.

The Royals made a battle out of their game with the Pistons for two periods. At the half, Detroit led, 53-51. But after that, the Pistons began to pour it on and had built up a 111-65 margin early in the fourth quarter.

Trooper Nabs Boy, Girl Missing From Near Athensville

An alert State trooper nabbed a 19-year-old youth wanted on a forgery charge and his 26-year-old woman companion, reported as missing from her home since Nov. 29, at the south edge of Jacksonville Saturday night after receiving a radio message from the sheriff's office.

Robert Billy Buchanan, 19, of Jacksonville, was picked up on a warrant charging forgery and confined to the Morgan county jail.

In company with Buchanan was Freda McElroy, 26, of near Athensville, the object of a statewide search by authorities since her parents reported her missing Nov. 29.

Sheriff Leonard Stone of Greene county drove the girl's parents to the Morgan county jail Saturday night and returned them to their home near Athensville.

The youth was spotted in Murfreesboro and the information telephoned to turnkey Carroll Ryan at the county jail. The information was then broadcast to all state, county and city patrol cars in the area. Trooper Richard Owens spotted the couple just south of the city and took them into custody.

The report from the NLN representatives who visited the school noted that the plans for the new School of Nursing building and residence had been studied, and were considered excellent. The Board of Trustees was commended for its part in the project.

Crash Injures Two; Doctor Hits Plant; Explosion Threatens

A string of freak accidents Saturday afternoon hospitalized two, damaged three cars and a natural gas station and threatened the Roodhouse residents with an explosion and subsequent fire.

Hospitalized by the first of a series of strange mishaps were Jack Dawdy, 20-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dawdy, and Bob Garner, 19-year-old son of Mrs. William Kidd, all of Roodhouse.

According to State Police reports, the two boys were injured about 12:45 while attempting to start the Dawdy car which was being pushed west by Jim Dawdy, a brother of Jack.

Presumably the wheel locked and the accelerator stuck just as the car started, sending it careening over a bank, down a small grade where it struck two power poles before finally coming to rest. The accident occurred just outside the city limits of Roodhouse in front of the Byron McLamar farm.

The boys were rushed to Our Saviour's Hospital by the Mackey ambulance from Roodhouse, but not before several other incidents occurred.

Dr. Ludwig Dech of Roodhouse was summoned to the scene of the accident to give the victims emergency treatment. Hastening to the scene, Dech was forced to swerve to one side to avoid hitting a car driven by Walter Harms who was approaching the accident area. In doing so, he went off the road through an iron guard rail, clipping off concrete posts and struck the Roodhouse City Natural Gas Substation, releasing gas throughout the area.

Dr. Dech escaped without injury as city officials hastened to the station to take necessary precautions to prevent an explosion or fire from the escaping gas.

Both the Dawdy car and the Dech car were damaged extensively, but the Harms car got off with minor damage. State trooper Harold Walker was called to the scene assisted by Roodhouse City Police William Scott, and Greene county officials.

Late Saturday night the hospital reports showed the Garner youth in good condition. He is reported to be suffering from a broken right elbow and numerous scratches and abrasions. The Dawdy boy, however, is listed as critical, suffering from a known broken left leg, shock and possible internal injuries, the extent of which has not been determined.

WINCHESTER — The Extension service soil testing laboratory ran soil tests on 162 farms in Scott county during the past 12 months. These were 6,384 acres and 1,766 samples.

This was an increase of 15 farms over 1957, reports Farm Adviser Dale A. Hewitt.

Narrow Rows And High Population Puts Corn Into New 'Space' Era

By HAROLD GUITHER
Assistant Extension Editor University of Illinois College of Agriculture

URBANA — A Grundy county farmer who defied traditional corn-growing methods launched a "sputnik" in his cornfield this year. For when James F. Holderman of Morris planted 530 acres of corn in 21-inch rows, he plunged corn-growing into a new, narrow "space" age.

At the same time, he may have attained the highest average yield ever produced on such a large acreage in Illinois—and possibly in the whole Corn Belt.

But perhaps the most amazing feature of this whole program is that part of this sandy land had practically been abandoned when Holderman bought it several years ago.

With planting finished, Holderman tackled the cultivation problem. He sprayed one pound of 2,4-D to the acre before the corn came up. Then he took his 4-row cultivator and added extension so that he could cultivate ten 21-inch rows at a time, as he had planned. To handle the fertilizer, he built a platform over the back and sides of the cultivator.

"The fertilizer carried on the back platform counterbalanced the weight on the front and gave the back wheels more traction," Holderman points out. And this fertilizer platform was high enough to make loading easy from the back end of a truck.

Picking the corn presented the next obstacle. Holderman approached one major company about designing an experimental picker, but this company declined. So he took the major parts from six 2-row pickers, planning to build two 5-row pickers. The first picker that he used most of the season was made from a 2-row mounted picker with one row added ahead of the front wheels and two more on the outside. The second picker was a 5-row pull-type that he completed near the end of the season.

Conserves Moisture

What does Holderman think of this system, and what would he do in a dry year? "I'm going to do it again," he replied quickly, "and in a dry year I feel that this system will show even greater advantage."

"If there is enough moisture in the soil when we plant the corn, our close planting will keep it there," Holderman points out. Other things being equal, cool summers have produced the highest average corn yields. With 21-inch rows, the corn shoots up high enough to shade the soil in three to four weeks. The shaded sandy soil in his cornfields definitely stayed cooler and held more moisture than the soil in his neighbor's 40-inch rows across the road.

The agronomists agree that roots grow much better in a cool soil than in a hot soil. When I visited the Holderman cornfields in October after several weeks of dry weather, I was amazed to find moss growing on this sandy soil. Could there be any better proof that this high-population planting keeps the soil cool and cuts down evaporation loss?

Actually, in 1958 Holderman believes his corn had too much rain and not enough sun. He cites the Chicago Weather Bureau records, which show 45 percent fewer fair days than average. They figure a fair day one when the sun shines more than 75 percent of the time. They also recorded 40 percent more cloudy days than normal. The average maximum temperature was five degrees below normal, and the average minimum one degree below normal.

Holderman feels that he can cut field losses considerably by earlier picking next year. He has a dryer for his ear corn, so he can begin picking by mid-September, before the stalks break so much.

"Nothing Like It"

What do others think of this corn program? Farm Adviser Tascher enthusiastically declares, "Jim has taken research and applied it in a new way. This could be the next big break-through in corn production if we can get the breeding into corn so that it will stand better. The machinery can be made. I've seen nothing like this in my 29 years of extension work."

Corn breeder Leng comments, "Here is a farmer who has broken away from planting his corn the width of the ox yoke and shown a good reason for doing it! This is a fantastic achievement when we remember that Holderman planted 500 acres and produced an average yield of at least 150 bushels. This wasn't on just a few acres, where many of the big corn yields have been reported."

But Leng warns any farmer who is thinking about trying this program that he must be ready to accept its weaknesses.

"This system won't work without using a hybrid that will stand crowding and produce an ear under these high planting rates. But the single cross Jim is now using is notoriously poor in standing ability."

Leng believes corn breeders must combine stalk strength and yielding ability to make the program practical. "If we can do this, we will be able to crib 150-160 bushels from a field like this."

Stronger Stalk Sought

D. E. Alexander, another University of Illinois corn breeder, is working on high-population hybrids. Some of them look promising, but they're not yet ready for commercial production. Leng plans to cross some dwarf hybrids with high-population inbreds to see whether this might help strengthen the stalk.

A. L. Leng, who also heads the Illinois soil experiment field work, points out, "We have always increased yields by narrowing rows. But 1958 was an unusual year. Moisture was high, and the water table was high. Such a program may work differently on other soils."

But even if Holderman's system isn't practical for all farmers to use next year, he has torn holes in some old corn-growing traditions. He believes that he gets at least one-fourth more corn from narrow rows than from the regular-width rows. He feels that the close-row planting will give a greater percentage yield increase at lower fertility levels because of the lower competition between the corn plants. Jim Holderman has changed the thinking of many who doubted, and further advancements in corn-growing methods seem sure to follow.

From samples taken carefully at several spots over 200 acres on the Holderman "home farm," Earl Leng, University of Illinois corn breeder, estimates that corn yields averaged about 175 bushels an acre this year. One yield check showed 212 bushels and another 202 bushels where the corn still stood well. Where the corn lodged badly, yields dropped to 143 bushels. Leng emphasizes that he carefully measured the sampling areas, tested the corn for moisture and figured the yields on a No. 2 shelled basis. On 300 acres on another farm, yields averaged about 135 to 140 bushels. This field had a more sandy soil, but was also hit by hail and floods.

Getting corn out of the field proved one of Holderman's big problems. He estimates that he was able to haul about 125 bushels an acre into the crib. Because this high-population single-cross hybrid lodged badly in spots, the rest of the corn remained on the ground. In other places, the corn stood very well.

But this didn't cause too much of a problem on this farm. Some of the 2,500 hogs raised every year moved in and picked it up right after the picker finished the field.

This corn-growing feat was not accomplished with ordinary hybrid corn. Holderman will quickly point out that most hybrids show lots of barren stalks when crowded together at 28,000 plants an acre. But several years ago Bob Copper, corn breeder with Producers' Seed Company, told Holderman about HY2 x 07, a single cross that thrived better under high-population planting than any other in University of Illinois tests.

So Holderman tried some of it along with other hybrids and found that even in the dry year of 1954 it still produced 25 bushels more an acre than the others. So he bought more of it from the Illinois Seed Producers' Association, even though it cost more than three times as much as the usual double crosses most farmers use.

Not A New Cross

HY2 x 07 is not a new single-cross hybrid. Corn breeders have used it for at least 10 years. But it is one of the few hybrids that will stand high-population planting without leaving a lot of barren stalks. In 1957 Holderman averaged 95 bushels when he planted this corn in normal 40-inch rows with a population of about 18,000 plants an acre.

When Holderman was doing his planning for 1958, two University of Illinois research developments gave him the ideas for this new program.

For several years soil scientists M. B. Russell and D. B. Peters had covered some small corn plots with plastic during the growing season to study the corn's water use and water loss through evaporation. Their work showed that a large part of the summer rainfall and irrigation water applied during the growing season was lost through evaporation. Plots covered with plastic produced higher yields than plots receiving the natural rainfall, because the plastic prevented soil moisture from evaporating.

At the annual 1957 Farm Progress Show at Farmer City, A. L. Leng, another soil researcher from the University of Illinois, wanted to show how a farmer could grow as much on one acre as the average farmer could on two. So he applied 30 tons of manure and plowed down normal amounts of nitrogen, phosphate and potash. Then he planted four rows of corn and four rows of soybeans alternately in 24-inch rows.

Using the HY2 x 07 single cross, Leng produced 222 bushels an acre on the outside row and 190 bushels on the inside rows. Stand and planting rates without fertilization produced 107-bushel yields.

Soil Is Shaded

From these two research projects, Holderman reasoned in this way: "If narrow rows produce more than conventional rows, why not plant in narrower rows? And since corn plots covered with plastic lost less moisture by evaporation, he decided he could shade his soil at the same time with closely planted corn."

Although most of Holderman's sandy soil was very low in fertility when he started farming it, he has tested the soil and made plant food applications to make it productive. In 1958, with the help of Grundy County Farm Adviser M. E. Tascher, with whom he has worked for many years, he worked out a special plan.

This plan called for plowing down 64 pounds of nitrogen, 55 pounds of phosphate and 55 pounds of potash an acre with the old cornstalks. At planting time Holderman added 325 pounds of 5-20-20 starter fertilizer. With the single corn cultivation, he applied another 67 pounds of nitrogen. So, besides manure left by hogs and also spread on some of the fields, he added 167 pounds of nitrogen, 120 pounds of phosphate and 120 pounds of potash.

But getting the seed and working out a fertilizer plan was only the start of the problems Holderman faced.

More Christmas Trees Raised Right At Home

URBANA — More families cut their own Christmas trees this year than in many past years.

W. F. Bulkley, extension forestry specialist at the University of Illinois College of Agriculture, says that the supply of home-grown Christmas trees planted by farmers and landowners is getting larger every year.

For the past several years, more and more people have been picking their trees as they stood in the plantations, especially in the smaller communities. And more local-grown trees are getting to the sales lots.

According to a summary of Christmas tree markets made in 1955 about 100,000 trees were harvested in Illinois that year. Nearly all of them were pine. This year's harvest appears to total about 300,000, Bulkley says.

Foresters estimate that Illinois families decorate about 1½ million trees each year. Consumption of home-grown trees has tripled in the past three years because they are available on the lots and growers have been advertising them for sale and encouraging retailers to sell them.

Scotch pine has been most popular and most available. But in some communities red and jack pines have been the trees most growers had that were of market size.

The University of Illinois College of Agriculture has accepted a $200,000 grant from the Mooreman Manufacturing Company of Quincy, Ill., for long-range expansion of animal breeding research.

Illinois Farmers Outlook Letter

HISTORY OF BEEF: IS IT REPEATING?

In the beef cattle industry, 1958 was much like 1951—and 1959 may be like 1952. Note these similarities between 1958 and 1951:

Both 1958 and 1951 followed a period of relative stability in cattle numbers. Cattle numbers increased 4 million head in 1951, and apparently about the same in 1958. Beef output dropped by an amount equal to 7 pounds per person in 1951 and 5 pounds in 1958. Prices of choice steers reached an all-time monthly high of $36.93 in the spring of 1951, and a monthly high of $29.90 in the spring of 1958. In both years prices were lower in the fall than in the spring.

Remember 1952? What happened to cattle in 1952? Farmers continued to build up their herds even more than in 1951. They increased the rate of buildup from 4 million in 1951 to 6 million in 1952. But beef output increased by 6 pounds per person and cattle prices trended downward, though the largest price decline did not come until early in 1953.

Price Trend. Prices of choice steers made their all-time monthly average high of $36.93 in April 1951. They held around $36 through most of that year and then worked down to $30.00 by the end of 1952. Prices sank rapidly in the winter of 1953, and by April the monthly average for choice steers at Chicago was down to $22 a hundred pounds.

What of 1959? Farmers and ranchers will very likely hold back cattle again—perhaps even more than they held back in 1958. But some of the cattle and calves that were held back in the fall of 1957 and 1958 will be ready for market. Thus the output of beef surely will not decline, but is likely to increase. A relatively small increase in beef output combined with a substantial increase in the production of pork, and probably of poultry, seems likely to weaken the supports under cattle prices.

Differences. There are some important differences between the present outlook and the situation of seven years ago. The effects of some of these differences, however, tend to cancel out or offset one another. For example:

1. There is now no wartime inflation to subsidize in the year ahead as there was seven years ago.

2. Beef did not have to meet increasing competition from pork in 1952 as it will in 1959. The pork supply is expected to increase by about 12 percent next year. These differences do not seem to be sufficient to prevent the beginning of a downward adjustment in prices of beef cattle during the year ahead.

Chinese Puzzle

When we learn the name of Mao Tse-tung's successor as head of the Red Chinese government, and see the future bent of Peiping's policy, we will get our best understanding of the meaning of his retirement.

In the nature of things, we can never be sure we know all there is to know about events in the Communist world. But the external aspects of the changes which occur do give us some clues.

Mao, of course, is retaining his post as boss of the Communist party. That suggests, on the surface at least, that he is yielding administrative authority without yielding much power. For in both Russia and Red China, not to mention the satellites, the party is supreme.

It is true, too, that Mao is 65 and that he is just winding up a new four-year term of service. Thus there is a certain logic in his giving up the government reins.

On the other hand, persistent rumblings are heard that Red China's drastic new system of communes, which spell the virtual breakup of family life and the establishment of forced labor living in barracks, is extremely unpopular.

To step down at such a moment could indicate a response to this unrest. Certainly the top Reds in China are aware Mao's move may be so interpreted, both at home and abroad. They will be busy for some time trying to make it seem thoroughly plausible on other grounds.

But, as noted, the test will come with new events. If Mao's successor is one of his followers, no great significance may finally be read from the change.

But if the new Chinese leader is cut from another mold, and goes on to shape policies which modify the commune system, we will then be pretty safe in believing that Mao's withdrawal from government is more than the natural, expected retirement of an aging man.

Even then we should still have to try to fathom what influence the Russians might have had in bringing about this decision. There are more than a few who think Moscow cannot be unhappy that Mao, the stern Marxist often critical of Soviet policy, soon will be removed from one great active arena of Communist endeavor.

File For Next Year

Some of us can covet our toddling children into keeping their hot little fists off the Christmas tree. But we have to face it: Most of them can't be bluffed away.

The kids know a natural target when they see one. Who wouldn't want to put the crusher on a gaily colored, fragile thing like a Christmas ornament?

But parental ingenuity is a wonderful thing, too. The other day a story popped up about a fellow who solved the problem by turning his Christmas tree upside down and hanging it from the ceiling.

Certainly his approach was bold. It is an effort that will not pass unnoticed. Yet, since we are all pretty accustomed to looking at trees right side up and on the floor, this involves something of a psychological wrench.

An alternative that comes to mind is to surround the tree with an electrified fence (mild charge, of course). The fence itself could be gaily decorated, and might enhance the whole scene.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Please go down that gun and go back to being the nice, clean-shaven Dr. Styer."

This message, scrawled on a Christmas card by a fan, is one reaction accorded TV star Richard Boone. He gets all kinds, thanks to the professional lives he leads.

SIDE GLANCES

"We're trying out our Christmas presents—Helen's cape and my barbecue grill!"

For two seasons, he starred as the dedicated doctor on the ambitious "Medic" show. Now he's finishing up his second year of films in the popular "Have Gun, Will Travel" series.

Plus which he has done some distinguished work in movies and live TV. Next Feb. 12, he plans to open on Broadway as Abe Lincoln in a play about the Lincoln-Douglas debates, "The Rivalry."

"Right now, there is real confusion among the fans because 'Medic' is getting a big play in syndication," Boone remarked. "In fact, it is getting better ratings in nearly all locations than it did when it was on NBC. Some folks think I should give up the gun and go back to the scalpel."

No chance. "Medic," which solved a lot of ills, couldn't cure itself. It suffered a final demise. Boone has three years to go under contract with "Have Gun, Will Travel" and "The Rifleman."

Judging from the popularity of the show, he'll go the full term. That doesn't upset him.

"I've done two years as Paladin and I haven't tired of him yet," he said. "He's a delightful character to play, and the very nature of the show allows us to move around so we don't get stale. This year we did a fourth of the shows on location — at Lone Pine, Big Bear, Squaw Valley in California and in Gallup, N.M."

"Next year, we plan to go to Hawaii and Cuernavaca. We're also hoping to go to Europe."

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Wilbur DuBois, Secretary of the Securities and Exchange Commission, tells this story of higher finance—family level department.

A woman went to her bank and asked to borrow $3,000 by a car. The loan officer looked up her record and found she had $3,000 in a savings account.

"Why don't you take that money and buy your car?" he asked. "It would save you paying interest."

"I can't do that," said the woman. "My husband doesn't know I have the money."

"What do you mean?" asked the loan officer doubtfully. "My husband likes to play the horses," she explained. "Every day he looks over the form sheet, picks a horse and gives me two dollars to call the bookie and place the bet."

"I don't call the bookie," the woman went on. "I just keep the two dollars. If one of his horses wins, I pay off at the track figure. But so far I'm $3,000 ahead."

MOST NOVEL Christmas decorations in town are the 180 one-pound cookies which hang from a 12-foot Christmas tree in the Mayflower Hotel. The enormous goodies, which are shaped like people and animals, are the creations of Washington housewife Mrs. Gilbert LaGorce.

As soon as the tree was set up in the lobby, a small fence was placed around it to prevent enthusiastic tots from trying to sample the trimmings. The only trouble with the security device is that it was designed for kids instead of adults.

Bellhops say they have lost count of the number of wide-eyed grownups whom they have caught leaning over the fence in an effort to reach the cookies. In fact, one eager woman almost knocked over the tree when she leaned too far, lost her balance and fell against it.

UNCLE SAM is tough on expense accounts than Adolf Hitler. One of the top German scientists working on American rocket programs complains wryly that the Fuehrer was a soft touch compared to U.S. auditors.

MEXICAN EMBASSY Minister Don Vicente Sanchez Gavito has the most unusual language problem of any foreign diplomat in town. The charming official, who was recently appointed to replace departing Ambassador Don Manuel Tello until a new envoy is named, spent most of his childhood in Manhattan.

The result is that he speaks English like a typical New York native. In order to convince people that he's really Mexican, friends say that the diplomat often fakes a Spanish accent.

OTHER NIGHT AT a big hotel Christmas reception, the harassed chef almost panicked when he realized that he had allowed a dish of meat balls, which hadn't cooked long enough, to be carried to the buffet table. The mistake, however, turned out to be the highlight of the party.

Guests voted the rare meat balls the best hors d'oeuvre on the table. And some even complained when the next batch was delivered well done.

RUSSIAN DIPLOMATS are liable to being a lot of impromptu entertaining which they didn't include in their original holiday party plans.

At a recent businessmen's luncheon, one of the guests told Soviet Ambassador Mikhail Menshikov that he wished the import duties on Russian vodka could be lowered so that U.S. liquor stores could start stocking it.

"I can't do anything about import duties," Menshikov replied. "But I'll be glad to give anyone here a drink of Russian vodka at the embassy anytime he wants one."

Several of the businessmen privately confess that they plan to test the sincerity of Menshikov's invitation the first chance they get.

SIMONE DU LETTAY, wife of the French Assistant Military Attache, was startled when her car started making a high pitched whining noise as she was backing out of the garage. She immediately called a mechanic.

The World Today

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an anti-recession move earlier this year, Congress voted one billion dollars to buy mortgages on homes costing $13,500 or less. The idea was to encourage building of lower priced homes.

Those funds have run out. Efforts will be made in the new session to get more money for this purpose. The Eisenhower administration—which fought the legislation last spring—is likely to do so again.

The money went to the Federal National Mortgage Assn. — called Fanny Mae, from its initials. This agency buys the mortgages and, in turn, sells such mortgages to private investors.

It deals in mortgages insured by the Federal Housing Administration.

The idea of the program was not only to encourage builders—buying mortgages from them would give them more cash to use—but to encourage building particularly in the low-priced home field.

The billion dollar fund was rammed through last April over President Eisenhower's protests.

Already Fanny Mae has committed the full billion. When Congress returns next month efforts will be made to get another billion for Fanny Mae to buy mortgages in the low-priced field.

But this week there were indications the Eisenhower administration may try to block this as part of its economy drive.

It was this week that Eisenhower announced his proposed budget for next fiscal year would be 77 billion dollars, or about three billion less than is being spent this bookkeeping year, ending next June 30.

Such a budget reduction would require cutting some government programs, possibly eliminating others.

In a statement explaining the President's 77 billion goal, the White House said: "Reductions in total spending will be achieved in part by reason of the ending of temporary programs in agriculture, unemployment insurance, and housing."

Heading off another billion for Fanny Mae to use seems a likely economy target for the administration.

Grandparents Can Provide Needed Brake on Children

MY MARIE DAERR

What grandparent hasn't been accused—or hasn't accused himself—of spoiling his grandchildren?

In the opinion of at least one social worker, Grandma and Grandpa often play just the opposite kind of role. Mrs. Nelida Ferrari, who recently finished a three-year study of older people, sees them as a useful behavior "brake" for Junior in this fast-paced world.

She just wishes Grandma and Grandpa had more chance to use that brake.

"Modern living arrangements always don't permit grandparents to see their grandchildren often enough," Mrs. Ferrari said. "There should be more communication between them."

"Actually, grandparents have much to give their grandchildren—and I don't mean bikes and dance dresses."

"The mere fact that these older people have lived so many years makes them invaluable companions to their grandchildren."

"They have maturity and experience. With 60 or 70 or even 80 years of living behind them, they can give our youngsters a valuable new perspective."

Naturally, grandma and granddaughter, or grandpa and grandson, aren't going to see eye to eye.

"Of course, they will disagree," Mrs. Ferrari said. "But Junior and his sister also disagree with their parents and with other youngsters. A little quarreling won't hurt the relationship a bit."

Mom and Pop, of the middle-aged generation, can learn something from their elders, too, Mrs. Ferrari believes.

"Many middle-aged people are just plain scared of retirement," Mrs. Ferrari said. "They can't face the thought of growing old, because they are completely unfamiliar with the experiences that come with aging."

"But if they talk to persons who have had these experiences, they will learn things that will chase away many of their fears."

Q—My husband died nine months ago. Recently a man of my own age, whose wife died several years ago, asked to take me out. I'm hesitant, because I wonder if this wouldn't be "stepping out" too soon after my husband's death. What is your opinion?—Mrs. J. R.

A—Traditional periods of mourning seem to have yielded completely to modern custom. I see no reason why you shouldn't accept this man's invitations.

Q—I am the wife of a man on Social Security. I am planning to take the reduced benefit at age 62. When I reach 65, can I get the full payment?—Mrs. L. W. B.

A—No. Your payments will continue at the reduced rate even after you reach 65.

WEEKLY BIBLE COMMENT

The Christian Outlook

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D.D.

The week between Christmas and New Year's is a time for reflection, for a sort of spiritual stocktaking in one's personal life, and for such an estimate as one can make into religious conditions and progress in the winning of the world to Christ.

One enters the week with a sense of the greatness of the Christian heritage and closes it on the threshold of a new year.

There is an inevitable challenge in the very fact of progress and newness. We cannot write 1959 instead of 1958 without an underlying, perhaps a subconscious feeling, about what the new year will bring, and about what we can make it.

I think a larger question is of the general outlook for Christianity, of our religion to it and its relation to us.

Are the churches, insofar as they represent Christianity gaining in their mission of world conquest for Christ, and is the coming year one of special hope?

I speak of the churches as representing Christianity, but the representation is wide and varied.

In the historic development, the range is from highly developed Romanism and Eastern orthodoxy to free and independent groups like the Quakers, and the emergence in our own time of powerful groups like the Seventh Day Adventists and Jehovah's Witnesses, whose relation to the more orthodox bodies seems not quite clear.

In general, I think it must be said that in the wide range of Christian groups, sects, and churches there is vastly more evidence of essential spirit than perhaps there has ever been before.

Interest in Christianity, especially in the attainment of Protestant unity, is a dominant matter at present, and it is here that the deepest, and perhaps most irreconcilable cleavage is found.

The cleavage is between those who see the goal of unity in more unified organization and central authority, and those who think of Christian unity in terms of free fellowship, with emphasis on the spiritual rather than organizational aspects.

To the extent that this question of central authority versus local autonomy is a very real issue the term "United Church" adopted by mergers is a presumptuous misnomer.

The United Church of Canada, for instance, often cited as a conspicuous example of union as a step toward ecumenicity, is "united" only as that one large church is itself concerned. Besides the large number of Baptist churches, and the large Anglican communion, the continuing Presbyterian church represents nearly one-third of the original Presbyterians who refused to enter into the union.

In view of the present controversial situation it seems to me that there is a profound need for emphasis upon the basic matter of spiritual unity, with a recognition that centralization and freedom are both aspects of Christian fellowship.

My own independence is concerned less with the autonomy of the local church than with the saying of Jesus in Matthew 18:20, "For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them." There are all the elements of a true church.

But I believe in ecumenicity as well as independence. I cannot see why a vast Christian organization cannot have the presence and inspiration of Christ as well as the devout two or three.

Two Nuns Make Use Of Old Xmas Cards

Does it break your heart to consider burning or tearing up those lovely Christmas cards you received this season?

Hold them—two nuns in the art department in a small girls' college in California would love to have these cards. The cards can be sent to them through the National Housing Center, Washington, D. C.

The Immaculate Heart College has become nationally famous for its unique style of art founded and fostered by Sister Magdalen Mary, I.H.M., chairman of the art department, and Sister Mary Corita, I.H.M., professor of art. The two Sisters specialize in use of broken bits of pottery, old jewelry, scraps of cloth, magazines, and other bric-a-brac to create beautiful mosaics and other works of art.

The fame of the art work of this school started when its students created special banners for an exhibit celebrating the centennial of the American Institute of Architects in 1957.

Currently the Sisters have a collection of oil paintings showing at the National Housing Center, Washington, D.C. where they exhibited a display of mosaics a year ago.

The two Sisters are just now completing a nation-wide tour to spread the gospel about their theories of art. Stated most simply, they aim to get everyone interested in art—not to become artists, particularly, but mainly to develop an appreciation of good art.

Through the Housing Center the Sisters have let it be known that they can use the lovely art that decorates so many Christmas cards. Some will be used for their decorations, others for special designs.

The Housing Center will act as a collection point and trans-shipper of your old Christmas cards. Mail them to the National Housing Center, 1625 L Street, N.W., Washington 6, D. C.

PROP MAN FORGETS—NEW BRITAIN, Conn. (AP)—A first grade Christmas play here almost had a sour ending.

With The Girl Scouts

Senior Scout Troop No. 1 has been very busy this month, participating in four major projects. We appreciate this activity because we know that these activities mean in terms of time, both for the girls and their leaders.

On Dec. 18 and 19 the troop held a rummage sale back of the jail in order to increase their treasury for the many camping trips they plan for the spring and summer months, and they were granted permission by the Board of Directors to hold this sale, since our local Council policy prohibits extra money-raising projects other than our Council-wide cookie and calendar sales.

On Dec. 26 one patrol decorated and participated in a float for the Chamber of Commerce annual Christmas parade. Their float depicted "Shepherds at the Manger," and we hope to make this a part of our annual programming each Christmas.

On Dec. 22, the troop sang carols for the patients at Passavant Memorial hospital, and this has been done by members of this troop for the past four years.

At Christian Home On Dec. 23, the dramatics patrol, under the direction of Mrs. Wadsworth Applebee, presented a play, "The Enchanted Christmas Tree," for the residents of the Christian Home. Many hours of practice and effort in assembling costumes and making settings went into the production of this half-hour performance, and we are sure it brought great pleasure to those who were fortunate enough to view it.

Intermediate Troop No. 27, which they had made themselves.

Our monthly bulletin to all registered adults, called The Prairie Schooner, usually a six-page pamphlet, is to be assembled and readied for mailing by volunteer Girl Scouts, Senior Scouts of Troop No. 1, who are working as office aides. The January bulletin has been put together by Kathy Ellis, Penny Morris and Judy Svob, who came to the Girl Scout office on Dec. 24 to assist with this task.

Troop 43, Franklin School, accompanied by leaders Mrs. Everett and Mrs. Cline, visited the Duncan Home on Dec. 22, at which time they presented the Nativity Scene in costume, and sang carols for the residents. On Monday, Dec. 15, the troop gave a Christmas program at the Franklin school for their mothers. They presented the Nativity Scene, sang carols and served refreshments.

Waverly—The annual Waverly Holiday tournament got underway here Friday with things going about as expected. Favored Riverton knocked host Waverly out of the meet, 52-31, and second seeded Virden downed Pawnee, 75-46. Afternoon play saw Franklin edge Northwestern, 44-43, and Girard wallop Tri-City, 69-42.

Flashes Win Thriller

Franklin and Northwestern opened the annual Waverly Holiday tournament in grand style Friday afternoon as the Flashes edged George Duncan's Wildcats from Palmyra in a battle-royal, 44-43. Franklin led all the way up until the final minute of play when Northwestern went into a one-point lead with only seconds to go. The Flashes surged ahead on a bucket by Dick Rawlins and this proved to be the clincher.

Northwestern had a chance to tie the game or win it just before the final run but two missed free throws erased any further threat.

Dick Rawlins' 16 points paced the scoring for Jim Bower's Flashes. Bill Billbruck topped Northwestern's output with 11.

IN THE 'WILD WEST' (SUSSEX)—Libby Wilkinson, 13, hops on a cow for a quick trip to her milking chores in the West Sussex section of England. She's a young cowhand on her father's farm not far from the town of Storrington.

'PAJAMA GAME' IS SOCCER—Clothes hanging on the sidelines look like a kind of signal for a soccer game being played in foggy section of London, England.

FOR SHORT STREETS?—The street signs in parts of Lakeside, Va., near Richmond, are only a little over four feet high so youngsters like this one can read them easily.

QUICK TRIP

OKEMAH, Okla. (AP)—Sheriff E. L. Jeter spent weeks talking about and preparing for a deer hunting trip to Colorado.

It took him two days to get to the hunting grounds and considerable time fixing up his camp. Finally ready to hunt, he walked 200 yards, saw a deer, and felled it. Another deer jumped up, and he shot it, too. So—it took him less than 15 minutes to get his limit.

About 250,000 acres of open range are burned by grass and brush fires every year in the United States.

Collecting recipes is worthwhile and a lot of fun. After many years a well-used file of recipes can become quite dog-eared. Prevent this by covering the cards with plastic or merely dip them in shellac. Shellac will prevent smudging as well as stiffen the cards.

If you want your popovers to have a glazed surface, bake them in heat-resistant glass custard cups. Iron popovers with individual wells do not give this surface.

Religion Figures Prominently In News Events During 1958

NEW YORK (AP)—If you look back over 1958, you will discover that religion made an unusual amount of news.

The top story was the death of Pope Pius XII and the election and coronation of Pope John XXIII, son of an Italian peasant. Archbishop Richard J. Cushing of Boston and Archbishop Francis O'Hara of Philadelphia were among the new cardinals appointed by Pope John.

Other significant events, in random order, included:

1. The ouster of 13 theologians from Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Ky. — about a third of the entire faculty — who objected to the policies of the seminary administration. The firing occurred in June.

A few weeks ago the central accrediting organization for Protestant schools in the United States strongly criticized the administration and gave the seminary a year to correct what were called intolerable conditions, or face loss of accredited standing. Details of the controversy have not been made public.

2. Merger on May 28 of the United Presbyterian Church of North America and the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. into a unified denomination, the United Presbyterian Church in America. The total membership is 3 1/4 million, fourth largest among United States Protestant denominations.

3. The increasing tendency of Southern clergymen to join in working for a moderate approach to racial problems in the South, including combined moves by pastors in Atlanta and Little Rock. The non-denominational monthly Pulpit Direct said a poll showed four out of five Protestant ministers in 17 Southern states are in favor of complying with the Supreme Court school integration order.

4. Mounting discussion of religious affiliations of political candidates, sparked by the possibility of Sen. John Kennedy (D-Mass.) a Roman Catholic, becoming a presidential nominee.

5. Conviction and subsequent acquittal of the Most Rev. Pietro Fiondelli, Roman Catholic bishop of Prato, Italy, of slander charges. The case, which shook church-state relations in Italy, grew out of the bishop's calling an atheist and his wife "public sinners" for refusing to be married in a religious ceremony after their civil marriage.

6. Growing discussion over the status of Protestants in the South American republic of Colombia.

7. Battle over the New York City policy of prohibiting dissemination of birth control information to patients in city hospitals, resulting in a modification of the policy. Now birth control therapy will be permitted in city hospitals where medical needs dictate. Protestant and Jewish groups opposed the ban; Roman Catholics defended it.

8. The training conducted in deep snow and sub-zero temperatures in the high Sierras, is designed to familiarize Marines with cold weather infantry tactics and fighting in rough terrain.

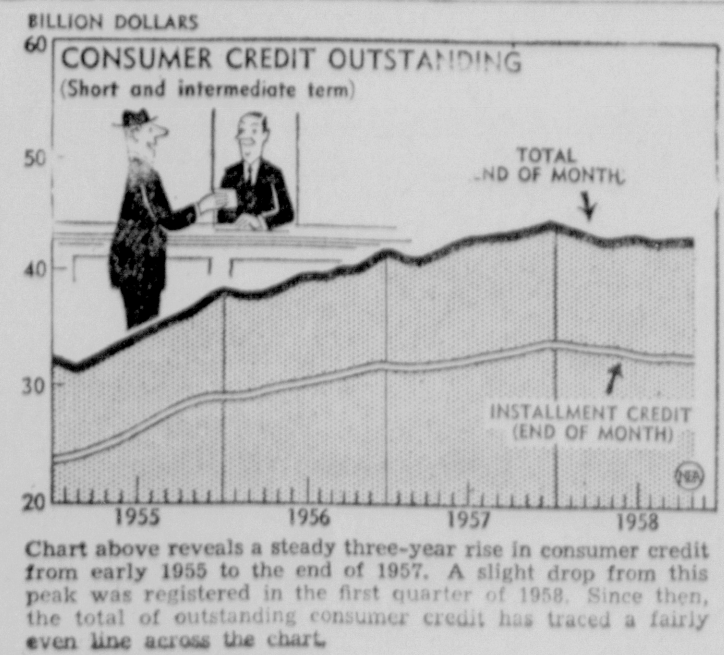

CHILD RUNS STICK OF WOOD IN PALM OF HAND PLAYING

JERSEYVILLE—Edward Murray, aged 10, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Murray of Route 1, Dow was treated at the Jersey Community hospital Tuesday afternoon for a hand injury.

The boy ran a stick into the palm of his left hand while playing at the Pearl Plumb residence in Jerseyville.

At the hospital the wood was removed from the hand, and the wound was drained and sutured and the patient returned home.

Al-C Paul Runkel Receives 'Airman Of Month' Award

Airman First Class Paul A. Runkel, a former Jacksonville man, has received the coveted "Airman of the Month" award from Harlingen Air Force Base at Harlingen, Texas. Runkel won the award for December in heavy competition from many other base units.

His name will be placed on the "Airman" plaque which will be hung in the Emergency Section of the Base Hospital where Runkel is employed. The Harlingen Chamber of Commerce, which helps to sponsor the award, presented him with a $25 check, an auto store gift certificate, two steak dinners at a Harlingen restaurant and 12 free passes to Interstate Theaters.

He also received a letter of appreciation from Col. Norman L. Calish, Wing Commander who presented the plaque to Runkel during the ceremonies held at the Wing Headquarters.

Airman Runkel spent his childhood in Jacksonville. Following the death of his mother, he made his home with Fred W. and the late Mrs. Atkinson, a great uncle and aunt. He is the grandson of Fred W. Runkel and the nephew of Charles P. Kenneth E., and Fred L. Runkel, all of this city. Airman Runkel now makes his home in Longview, Texas.

The Motor Purrs, But The Cat Doesn't Feel So Hot

Joy Ryan of 808 North Diamond discovered Friday night much to his dismay that a purring sound under the hood does not necessarily mean a good-running motor.

Ryan was returning to work in his 1957 Chevrolet when he heard what he thought was a purring sound. Aroused by the repeated sound of what seemed to be an anguished cat, he stopped his car, got out and looked around: he found nothing.

Once more underway he again discovered the strange noise with ever increasing volume. He stopped again and this time looked under the hood of the car. There he found a punctured radiator, a badly bent fan and a large disintegrated cat. The large yellow cat had crawled under the hood and had become caught in the fan as the engine started.

Ryan called a cab to get him back to work, and the yellow cat was last seen limping off into the night.

Auto Overtakes On 36-54, Four Injured In Crash

Four members of a Chicago family were injured Friday about 2:30 p.m. in an accident two and one-half miles east of Riggs on Routes 36-54.

Treated for injuries at Passavant hospital were Lester B. Nehrkke, 32, neck injuries; Wayne R. Nehrkke, 18, head injuries; Donald J. Nehrkke, 20, scratches; and Martin Shornstein, 72, fractured ribs. William H. Nehrkke, 23, driver of the auto, was not injured in the crash. All four of the injured were released from Passavant hospital late Friday evening.

According to reports compiled by police, an auto driven by William H. Nehrkke, 22, Chicago, was headed east when he attempted to pass a truck driven by Walter Baker, 609 Hardin Ave. His auto swerved, causing him to lose control. The auto ran into the ditch on the north side of the highway and overturned. Baker was not involved in the accident. All occupants of the auto listed the same Chicago address.

State trooper Charles Batley attended at the scene of the accident.

The wrecked auto was towed to the John Ellis garage.

Virginia Man Shot With Rifle; Wife Released On Bond

VIRGINIA — Lester Anderson, 47, was shot through the body and the left arm about 5:30 p.m. Christmas day by his wife, June, in an incident climaxing a family argument, according to Case County Chief Deputy Alvin O. Reichert.

Anderson's condition is reported as "satisfactory" at Passavant hospital in Jacksonville where he is suffering from loss of blood and internal injuries.

Deputy Reichert said the bullet entered Anderson's right side, passed through the body and came out his left arm. He was rushed to Passavant hospital in an ambulance.

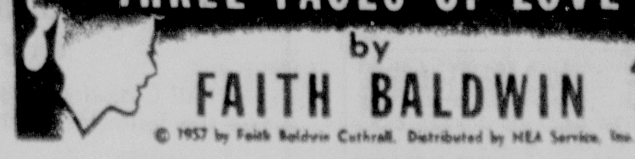

Mrs. June Anderson was held by Case authorities on a preliminary charge of assault with a deadly weapon and released on $1,000 bond Friday afternoon.

According to authorities, Mrs. Anderson jokingly pointed a .22 caliber rifle at her husband and it discharged.

Births

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Martin, 907 Mothers Street, became the parents of a daughter born at 12:28 p.m. Dec. 24 at Passavant Hospital, weighing eight pounds, eight ounces.

THREE FACES OF LOVE by FAITH BALDWIN

Now and until Emmy would weave into their pattern, and a new design. They must always confer about Emmy, her health or her loss, her first schooling and friends, her growing demands. Today it would be the right shoes for the running feet, and the early inoculations; tomorrow it would be tonsils and other health measures. Later it would be conferences with harried heads of nursery schools, then with teachers and principals. It would move to the first party, the first boy, the first formal, and go on and on and on.

They would have to go with it, and grow up with Emmy; they really hadn't had time to grow up before, being too happy and self-centered and engrossed.

Day by day, week by week, year by year, and as then, hour by hour they were learning something of the nature of love, its wellspring and source, its requirements and gifts.

This is a knowledge that cannot be shared even with each other save in the uncertain words and inadequate gestures, but it is a sustaining thing.

They were also learning new conflicts, for it is integral that parents are not always in agreement, and where they were separate each in his own relationship to Emmy—they sometimes disagreed.

These were not serious quarrels, but Adam and Hope were astonished to find that they must disagree over Emmy.

Throughout their marriage their quarrels had not been as harsh as the spoken word sounds; they had, rather, met in conflicts of opinion or understanding, and experienced irritation or exasperation. All this had moved through their marriage as gnats move through an otherwise flawless summer night and were in-

"Of course not, but that's entirely different."

In the main they agreed, and shared their anxieties, questions, and child. And Dr. Emile said, settling his namesake on his knee and tilting her chin with his strong spatulate fingers, the better to observe her. "I think you're doing a good job."

"Well, thanks," said Hope, "but we don't always agree on how to do it."

"Naturally," said Dr. Emile. "This is a girl," he added as Emmy shrieked with sudden laughter, put both hands in his thick white hair and tugged. "Ouch," said her godfather, "take it a little easier, will you? Yes, she's a girl," he went on, "and so the older girl disagrees with the boy. Had it been a boy, it would have been the same, the older boy disagreeing with the girl."

"For Pete's sake," said Hope, "don't start talking about sex."

"But it's there," said their friend mildly. "You don't have to dwell on it, or get yourself tangled up in the complex angles. It's still there in Adam, the protectiveness which is different from your maternal desire to shelter your child as, once, you sheltered her within yourself. For as Adam, in Emmy, sees you in miniature, so in Adam's love for his daughter there is his love for you—on a different level. If Emile here were a son—" he smiled—"well, leave it to the books and those who write them," he advised. "You'll go on loving Emmy, making mistakes with her, and having your differences of opinion. That's as it should be. Don't worry about it and don't try to put on the too-heavy helmets and descend into the depths. Having just returned from Florida, I am obsessed by diver and water images," he remarked, "so I think that moderate skin diving into the psychology of your relationships is indicated."

"Sounds fine," said Hope, "and thank you for the baby alligator. I don't like it, Emmy loves it, and it will soon outgrow the bathtub."

Whether your clothes are costly or inexpensive, take care of them. Treat them gently. Put them on good padded hangers, mend them and have them cleaned, and avoid the temptation to get just one more wearing from a pastel wool dress.

Brown-and-black make a wonderful color combination but only when fabric and styling are superior. Otherwise, these two together can present a shabby, dowdy appearance.

"NURSE TRUCK" — Odd-looking vehicle shown in Napa, Calif., "nurse truck." The gun-like projection carries fertilizer from truck hopper to a flexible spout which feeds the fertilizer into the aircraft at rear. The planes then "bomb" evenly a swath 30 feet wide from a height of about 100 feet. While cost of aerial application is relatively high, it is reported profitable on large spreads. Method offers additional advantage of fertilizing quickly to take advantage of good weather.

THIS WEEK IN BUSINESS

By WALTER BREEDER JR.
AP Business News Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — It was a merry Christmas for many U. S. businessmen this week. And prospects for a happy and prosperous new year looked brighter than they have in months.

Gone was the attitude of bloom and doom that clouded the business picture during last year's holiday season.

Retailers caught their breath after a last-minute Christmas shopping surge that pushed Yule sales to new highs.

Stockholders also had cause for cheer. A surprise rally on Christmas Eve gave the stock market its biggest lift in two weeks, ending The Associated Press 60-stock average to a record peak of $210.60.

Stock sales in the latest week totaled 8,943,580 shares compared to 18,656,430 shares in the previous week and 9,907,914 in the same week last year.

Bond sales had a par value of $17,741,000 Christmas week, $34,850,000 the week before and $1,015,900 in the corresponding 1957 week.

The auto industry took time out to celebrate Christmas and then get back to work. Production for the week was up a whopping 31 per cent from last year's levels. Behind Detroit's production spurt lay the confident belief that the public would buy at least 5 million U. S.-built cars next year compared to a paltry 4,200,000 in 1958.

An annual roundup of business sentiment by the U. S. Commerce Department this week would virtually all other major industrial groups betting on a steady upturn.

Steel makers figured their 1959 production at 106 to 110 million ingot tons—an increase of about 25 per cent.

Spurred by developments in the space and satellite field, the fast-growing electronics industry set its sights on eight billion dollars worth of business next year—a gain of 14 per cent.

Other industries forecasting solid if less spectacular gains included lumber, glass, chemicals, foods and beverages, metal cans, folding cartons, oil field equipment, electrical machinery, home appliances, furniture and machine tools.

Predictions were hedged in with "ifs," however. A steel strike in mid-1959 could throw the rosiest forecasts out of kilter, businessmen pointed out. Lumber producers said a "tight" credit policy, and a resultant shortage of mortgage funds, could put a damper on home construction.

There were other discordant notes this week. Tough talk from Moscow worried some businessmen—particularly Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko's threat that the Berlin dispute could touch off a big war whose flames would spread to the United States. A financial crisis appeared to be boiling up in France. American oil companies got into a war of words with the Venezuelan government over a boost in Venezuela's oil tax. The State Department, fearing retaliatory moves, urged the oil companies to tone their protests down.

President Eisenhower's proposal for a balanced 77-billion-dollar federal budget next year drew the usual mixed response. Republicans hailed it as a welcome Christmas gift to taxpayers; Democrats called it unrealistic. Eisenhower ruled out a general increase in income taxes but called for a higher federal tax on gasoline and another boost in postal rates.

The U. S. Labor Department's latest report on consumer prices showed living costs back at their July peak—123.9 per cent of the 1947-48 average. Higher prices for 1959 automobiles accounted for most of the increase in the consumer price index for mid-November.

On the brighter side, take-home pay of factory workers touched a new record high—$28.41 a week (after tax deductions) for a man with three dependents. Higher basic wage rates and a longer work week contributed to the increase.

Prices of home heating oil inches up this week as cold weather spurred consumption. Montgomery Ward & Co., the nation's second largest mail order house, also made price news. Its mid-winter sales catalog showed prices of 16,042 items of merchandise down 10 per cent, on average, from last fall.

Briefly over the business scene: The Cadillac Division of General Motors Corp. reported 10,945 sold in the first three weeks of December—a record high. . . The Federal Reserve Board's index of industrial production, which measures output of the nation's factories, mills and mines, climbed 2 percentage points in November to 141 per cent of the 1947-49 average. That compares with the recession low of 126 last April and the record high of 145 in August 1957. . . Machine tool orders declined sharply in November but manufacturers look for improvement next year. . . J. Sinclair Armstrong, one-time chairman of the Securities & Exchange Commission, resigned as assistant secretary of the Navy to become executive vice president of United States Trust Co. of New York. . . Americans will have puffed 430 billion cigarettes this year—a gain of 5 per cent over 1957. Harry M. Wooten, tobacco industry consultant, reports. Cigarette manufacturers, he says, will show a combined 1958 profit of 220 million dollars on four billion dollars of sales.
